Carter Backs Curtis For Dem's Leader

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — In telegrams to all members of the Democratic National Committee, President-elect Jimmy Carter today recommended former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis as chairman.

Carter's endorsement makes the choice almost inevitable.

In recommending Curtis, Carter said "I know he shares my strong belief that the Democratic party must belong to the people and not just the political figures."

Rightist Militia Patrol Bierut

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Rightist militiamen blocked streets leading from Beirut's Moslem sector and searched cars at gunpoint for weapons today after a series of terrorist attacks in the city's Christian quarter, residents of the district said.

News of the rightist crackdown was relayed by phone to UPI offices in Nicosia, despite the imposition of strict censorship on all incoming and outgoing dispatches by Arab security forces in Beirut.

Gilmore Cold to Visiting Lawyers

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Gary Gilmore turned a cold shoulder on attorneys who wanted to question him about one of his admitted murder victims, in a case for which he has not yet been tried, refusing to leave his Death Row cell to see them.

"He never even left his cell," a Utah State Prison source said. "They didn't even lay eyes on him."

The attorneys represent the widow and child of one of Gilmore's victims, Max Jensen, and two insurance companies that paid benefits to the family.

Armed with a court order allowing them access to the prison, they tried Wednesday to take depositions concerning the July 19 killing of Jensen during a robbery on an Orem, Utah, service station.

Cancer Deaths

Linked to Location

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Cancer Institute released a report Wednesday on cancer death rates among blacks, American Indians, Chinese and Japanese in the United States, as a followup to a 1975 study of geographic patterns of cancer among whites.

The report said more men than women and more nonwhites than whites die of cancer, but striking geographic similarities in overall cancer death rates indicate a relationship between environmental factors and the disease.

Hotel Union Chief Orders Big Benefits

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The national president of the striking hotel employees union took charge of negotiations with the hotel association Wednesday, ordered $200,000 in benefits for the strikers and warned that the walkout may spread.

Edward Hanley flew from Cincinnati Wednesday to take over the talks with hotel owners just as inside reports began circulating that the union was weakening on its demands.

"I took over the negotiations," Hanley said. "I stepped in. The local union usually has autonomy, but when things are at a standstill, I come in."

Albany Alive with Laughter, Orchids and Men's Cologne

Maurice Hinchey

By CHAZY DOWALIBY

ALBANY — There was mirth and madness and gallons of men's cologne at the opening session of the state legislature Wednesday.

New assemblymen meekly took their back row seats in the wood-carved, stained-glass chamber as TV crews adjusted lights and camera angles for a live broadcast of the governor's annual message.

Little girls in smock dresses and pigtailed were everywhere. They came with their daddies, the well-barbered fleet of young politicians, to witness the centuries-old ceremony.

Women wore orchid corsages and patent leather shoes and elbowed their way to the folding wooden chairs that packed the great hall.

Nobody could get an elevator and hundreds of puffing legislators and guests plowed their way up and down the marble stairs of the $2 billion Empire State Plaza.

On the floor the survivors of last November's popularity poll congratulated each other on securing another two years of employment in these hard times and compared margin-of-victory votes.

On the podium there seemed to be no end of kissing and hugging sincere hand shakes. Everyone smiled and spoke well of the future.

101st District Democrat Maurice Hinchey said his share of hellos and State Senator Richard Schermerhorn managed to make an entrance just behind the Senate leadership when the to houses gathered to listen to Gov. Hugh Carey's new year plans.

The governor got his standard standing ovation from the heavily Democratic audience, but his half-hour speech drew only three spontaneous outbursts — the loudest thunder of approval for a promise that there would be no new taxes on state citizens this year.

There were also some well-known faces in the crowd, including a number of Carey's cabinet members, most of whom sat passively through the annual call to arms.

Welfare Commissioner Phillip Toia grimaced almost imperceptibly as the governor glossed over possible welfare

BEECHEL HEARING

James Beechel, 25, charged with hindering prosecution and harboring a fugitive during the recent $1.7 million heroin drug bust in the Saugerties-Kingston area, is shown arriving in Ulster Justice Court Tuesday where his demand for a preliminary hearing was granted by Justice John Gotelli. He is being held in Ulster County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bail. Frank Engle, defense counsel, and a sheriff deputy accompanied Beechel to court.

By Popular Demand: Lenny's To Stay Open

By ROB BORSELLINO

KINGSTON — Lenny Price, a man whose business card identifies him as an auctioneer, PR consultant, political consultant, judo instructor, social worker, cartoonist, wrestler, comedian, lecturer, author, weightlifter, art teacher, exercise instructor and advertising consultant, has changed his mind about closing his small store on Broadway.

The reason he's decided not to shut up shop and leave town, he says, is an ad he placed in the Daily Freeman several weeks ago which read: Due to popular demand, Lenny's is closing its doors. We tried to get you what you needed for LESS, but Kingstonsians seem to enjoy paying MORE.....so God bless you and GOOD BYE.

"Since the ad came out business has been great. People have been coming in and other businessmen have been calling and saying they wish they had thought of it first," said Price.

He claims it was not a publicity stunt.

"It was a couple of weeks before Christmas and I was dying here. Nothing, day after day and I was bitter and I wrote the ad."

His shop, which opened with hardware and children's clothing last March, now does a brisk business selling used clothing, rings, pipes, papers and other "head shop" paraphernalia. Within the span of an hour recently, he sold one woolen vest, at $2.14, three eight-track tapes, at 50¢ each.

Broadway East Plan Gets Setback

CD Funds Ruled Out For Shopping Area

By SID LEAVITT
Freeman staff

KINGSTON — Federal officials have ruled out the possibility that community development funds could be used to spur commercial construction in the downtown Broadway East area, Mayor Francis R. Koenig said today.

Koenig, who said he was "sort of set back" by the federal decision, still was optimistic that a long-planned shopping center could be gotten underway this year along with a downtown arterial highway that is scheduled to go into construction within weeks.

However, according to Warren Butler of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the city can't use federal community development money to stimulate commercial construction.

Koenig's plan to do so, outlined in his annual message to the Kingston Common Council Saturday, had been overruled by Sect. 105 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, which doesn't list commercial construction as an eligible activity.

"Unless a facility is specifically authorized in that section, it may not be assisted," said Butler, who is HUD's acting secretary of community development and planning in Washington.

Kingston currently is in the middle of a five-year community development program which is estimated to bring a total $6 million in CD entitlement funds into the city.

Woodstock Estates Hearing Tumultuous

Townsmen Fight Permit

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

WOODSTOCK — A cryptically worded "Keep the CRAP out of the CREEK" placard at the front door set the tone of the Department of Conservation hearing on a permit for Woodstock Estates that would allow a discharge of 30,000 gallons of treated sewage daily into Tannery Brook. Massive opposition was mounted against the proposal, but many who participated in the highly vocal session left believing the exercise had been futile.

Near the end of almost 8 hours of strongly worded statements, sworn testimony, and cross-examination, DEC engineer John Kwak disillusioned many when he said he thought the hearing had been "a waste of time, especially with the opposition I've seen."

Arguments often veered off into personal attacks against Estates owners and government officials, and into philosophic dissertations on global environmental concerns. Hearing officer Francis W. Serbent was moved, time and again, to remind opponents to return to the specific subject of the SPDES permit.

Some 35 speakers had their say, many of them rising to argue several times over. The heaviest rounds of applause in the marathon session went to housewife Susan Bair and Councilwoman Jane VanDeBogart. Said Mrs. Bair, "A child of two knows all that sewage shouldn't be put in the stream. Maybe Mr. Bell (former Assemblyman H. Clark Bell, now an Estates owner) needs a condominium, but maybe he could learn to do without it."

Promised Mrs. Bair, "If this goes through, everybody responsible is going to be dunked in the stream and have their heads held there until they are baptized with all that s---."

Mrs. VanDeBogart argued the permit would be for "the specific benefit of a few individuals at the expense of the majority, and the town's right to plan for orderly growth." It would remove from the townspeople, the town board, and their Planning Board and Conservation Commission, she said, the right to "mutually cooperate in determining future growth." Argued the councilwoman, "There is no explained need and no pressing need

Garbage Violations Suspected

PLATTEKILL — While lawyers for the town and Dutchess Sanitation battle in court again, the state police and sheriff's department are weighing the company's garbage trucks in hope of catching the Poughkeepsie-based company breaking the law.

The law enforcement agencies agreed to test the tonnage of Dutchess trucks hauling refuse into the Plattekill landfill after a meeting last week between local and county officials, the district attorney and concerned citizens who claimed the company was bringing in garbage from as far away as the Bronx.

Dist. Atty. Francis Vogt said this week that the police will be spot checking to see if Dutchess is violating a county law prohibiting the importation of more than 60 tons of non-organic material into the county each week.

The garbage war started almost a year ago when Dutchess began hauling refuse from across the river into its 74-acre landfill in Plattekill.

The town objected, asked Vogt for help until it could hire its own lawyer, and won a temporary injunction against the company.

Dutchess then was granted a change in the wording of the court order to allow them to cart non-organic or demolition material to the site.

Town attorney Michael Forrester then appealed to the Supreme Court uphold the local law prohibiting any imported dumping, without a trial.

Justice William Murray not only refused Plattekill's request but came out with a decision stating that "regional needs of an area dictate the necessity for landfill needs and transcend and town needs or local law."

Forrester and Dutchess attorney Harold

Mangold today present their arguments to the five judges of the Supreme Court Appellate Division in Albany, to which Plattekill appealed Murray's decision.

According to Vogt, who has stepped out of these legal proceedings, the case could have a staggering effect on the region.

"Basically what Judge Murray's decision says is that wherever a need exists, companies can come in from anywhere and dump garbage."

The district attorney adds that the landfill problem in New York State is acute, which accounts for Dutchess bringing refuse up from the Bronx to dispose of in the Plattekill site.

"If the judges uphold the lower court decision it could literally bury Plattekill in garbage," said Vogt.

Rash of Arsons Brings Shivers

By LYNN MULVANEY

BLOOMINGTON — They've got the shivers in Bloomington. Not from the cold, but from the alarming number of deliberately set early morning fires which have been destroying unoccupied houses one by one.

People are scared alright, said Postmaster Frederick Hofbauer. He has a sign posted in the lobby of the Bloomington Post Office alerting area residents to a meeting to be held tonight at 7 at the Bloomington Fire House. It is intended to inform residents concerning what police and fire officials have been doing to get to the bottom of the problem and to decide a future course of action.

If the first fire set doesn't total a building, it is torched again, another day. Residents in the Bloomington-Creek Locks area readily admit to being "scared stiff."

They wonder what is going to happen

when the arsonist or arsonists run out of vacant houses to set ablaze. They wonder whose house will be next? Will it be occupied?

Eighty-four-year-old Mrs. Neal Hotaling who has lived in her on Main Street in Bloomington for more than 50 years is "very scared," ever since the house across the street went up in flames. Five houses

Mother Flees from Burning Home

A mother and her four-year-old son escaped their burning home on Elting Road in Rosendale Wednesday morning after a fire reportedly erupted about 10:30, damaging the entire top floor and roof and inflicting water damage to the remainder of the frame building.

Mrs. Raymond Cole discovered the fire in a bedroom, called the fire department and ran from the building with her son Kevin. Another son, Anthony, 6, was in school.

It took close to 45 minutes to bring the blaze under control, according to Fire Police Chief Warren Mc Kane.

Rosendale, Binnewater, Bloomington and Tillson Fire Companies responded to the alarm. Ray Ritter was the officer in charge.

The house, located at 71 Elting Road, is owned by Mrs. Cole's father, Rosendale funeral director George Moylan, who arrived on the scene.

Household items, clothing and toys are being sought for the Cole family, who lost all their belongings in the fire.

The Coles are staying temporarily with the Moylans until they can reestablish a home.

Buddy Had a Yen for N.Y.

Last fall Elden Hopperstad and his dog Buddy moved from Vermont to the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie. While it may be hard to believe, seven-year-old Buddy went for a walk last October and is believed to have walked all the way to New York State where a member of the Putnam County Humane Society used dog tag information to locate his owner. The two were reunited at the Dallas-Ft. Worth Airport.

Good Eating, They Say

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Ants, grasshoppers and other insects are nutritious and also taste good, says the National University's Biology Institute.

Dr. Julieta Elorduy de Conconi, an institute researcher, said the grasshopper has up to 75 per cent protein per gram; black ants (hormiga chichatona) up to 58.3 per cent per gram; and waterbugs up to 68.7 per cent per gram.

Among the most commonly eaten in Mexico, the researcher said, are grasshoppers which at adulthood measure about 1.2 inches.

Up and Down Overtime

NEW YORK (UPI) — After hearing a talk from their new boss about being expected to work long hours, 17 members of Queens District Attorney John Santucci's staff found themselves stuck for an hour and a half in a courthouse elevator.

Santucci, who was appointed New Year's Day by Gov. Hugh Carey, stuck around to oversee Police and Fire Department rescue operations. He sent his family, who had come with him to meet his staff, to a restaurant for dinner.

Courthouse personnel had trouble for a while finding the right emergency key but rescue crews were able to position a working elevator next to the stalled one and the staff members escaped through emergency doors.

Santucci, who has criticized the condition of the courthouse, said, "I'll save my comments about the building's condition to another day. Right now I'm glad to see that everyone's okay."

As to the unexpected overtime, he added, "Those weren't the kind of long hours meant."

Eavesdropping Operator Invited to a Social

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The New England Telephone Co. has denied charges its operators eavesdropped on phone conversations involving prominent Rhode Island politicians because they had "nothing better to do."

The charges were made Wednesday in a lawsuit filed in Providence District Court by Norman J. Jacques, an unsuccessful Rhode Island congressional candidate in 1968 and 1976.

He is seeking $5,000 in punitive damages and wants the phone company to drop $1,200 in bills he owes from one campaign.

Jacques said he learned of the practice when he called actress Marlo Thomas, a personal friend, in 1973 and an operator broke in, saying: "You don't know me, but I know you."

Jacques said calls of several politicians also were monitored, including those of Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., former Gov. Frank Licht and former Providence Mayor Joseph A. Doorley.

"It could be they were just bored, that they had nothing better to do. But we could find out later if they were on somebody's payroll," Jacques said in explaining the suit.

A spokesman for New England Telephone said "privacy of communications is of paramount concern to the telephone company. Any employee who violates a customer's privacy is subject to severe discipline, up to and including dismissal.

Jacques said he invited the operator who broke into his conversation with Marlo Thomas to attend a social gathering at his cabin in Lincoln where he tape recorded comments she made about her job.

The tape, taken without the operator's knowledge, is prime evidence in the suit. Jacques said the woman, still employed by company, told of monitored conversations involving Pell, Licht and Doorley. The suit also included two affidavits from operators admitting the eavesdropping.

Weather and Us

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A professor studying the effects of weather on human behavior says an approaching cold front causes people to be more likely to be involved in accidents.

This conclusion is part of a study being conducted by Dr. Earl Sargent, a professor at the University of Tulsa.

Some of his other findings:

— People are more likely to become ill just before a cold front moves through an area.

— Civil service test scores are higher in the spring and autumn and lower in the summer months.

— There are more crimes against people in the late summer months than at any other time of the year.

— Piecework by industrial workers reaches a peak in the autumn and spring.

Ousted Cadets to Get Second Chance

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Cadets expelled in the U.S. Military Academy's worst cheating scandal will get a second chance, and penalties other than expulsion may be meted out to future Honor Code violators.

However, Army Secretary Martin Hoffman's announcement Wednesday that the ousted cadets may reapply was coupled with several statements about the administration of the academy and the Cadet Honor Code and left some wary about the future.

Some cadets have already applied for readmission and a few may return as early as this month or next, according to Lt. Col. Thomas Garigan and Jerry Forbus, school public information officers. All should be back by summer, they said.

Hoffman's announcement kept in force a readmission plan he had offered before he convened a special commission to study the honor question. He said that body, headed by former astronaut and former West Pointer Frank Borman, agreed with his decision.

"It will be good for the school, the class, and them," said David Chadwick of Buffalo, a senior cadet who will graduate this spring, a year ahead of the expelled cadets who had been his classmates for more than two years.

Chadwick said that what worried him about the plan was Hoffman's suggestion that the code's section making tolerating offenses as bad as cheating, lying or stealing might be changed. "That's what I'm worried about," he said.

Dennis Zambetti, a senior from Closter, N.J., called Hoffman's action "a good decision."

Bary Bomier, of Grand Blanc, Mich., said he had been separated from the Academy once for academic problems and had come back later — as the cadets who cheated will have to do.

The cadets who were expelled should not, Bomier said, have to "pay that high a price for what's happened here." He said he was "personally very impressed" with Hoffman's handling of the scandal and his feelings for cadets' situations.

One senior cadet who listened to Hoffman but who did not want to give his name said he was unhappy with the decision to readmit the cadets, adding that he didn't think all the cadets involved had been honest in their dealings with honor boards.

Hoffman's announcement that Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry would be replaced "in the spring" was the second move involving a top West Point official. Brig. Gen. Walter F. Ulmer, the commandant, was transferred Jan. 1 and left the school Wednesday, only hours after Hoffman's announcement.

"We feel it's time for new management," Hoffman said. "We feel the appropriate thing to do is bring in a new superintendent."

Meanwhile, Bomier seemed satisfied about the course of events that marred his senior year. "They'll still be my classmates," he said, "no matter when they graduate."

Wanted on 163 Counts of Criminal Sale

Fencing Suspect Surrenders

By LYNN MULVANEY
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — William Dumont, wanted for 163 counts of criminal sale and possession of hypodermic needles which were fenced last year at the phony police-operated Donny's Swap Shop in Kingston, turned himself in to city detectives shortly before nine this morning.

A warrant had been previously issued for the 36-year-old Dumont's arrest, but he was believed to be out of the state at the time. When detectives located him back in New York, he was given opportunity to give himself up.

Scheduled for arraignment in city court this morning, Dumont, who also goes by the name of William Colon, is charged with five counts of burglary in the second degree, four counts of possession, criminal possession of stolen property in the second degree, one count of criminal possession of stolen property in the first degree and two counts of criminal possession of stolen property in the third degree.

Detectives did not disclose where the burglaries took place.

Dumont gave no permanent address.

More than a dozen arrests have resulted since the city police and Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt's office and State Police, concluded a three-month undercover operation conducted last year with the use of a police-operated store front where stolen property was fenced.

About $45,000 worth of stolen property has been recovered and much of it reclaimed by owners. Unclaimed property was recently auctioned off to interested persons.

Business at Donny's Swap Shop was slow at first, but city burglars soon found out through word of mouth that the shop was paying higher prices than competitive fences and business picked up.

Undercover policeman Daniel Greaves was lauded for his adept handling of the store operation as an undercover agent.

The store took in stolen merchandise including everything from sophisticated electronic equipment, CB sets and stereos to jewelry and drug paraphernalia, including the 163 hypodermic needles, Dumont is alleged to have stolen.

Free bus transportation is available for senior citizens wishing to take part in the Senior Citizen's Nutrition Program in Mt. Tremper, according to Karen Schoonmaker of the Ulster County Community Action Committee, Inc., 286 Wall St., Kingston. Hot meals are served to anyone anyone over the age of 60, five days a week, she said. Further information concerning the bus route and schedule may be obtained by calling Richard Knight of Phoenicia between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Barringer Disputes $2,300 Claim

Olive Billed for Welfare Monies

OLIVE — Ulster County has billed the Town of Olive for $2,300 in welfare money, which it claimed was owed from 1975, but Supervisor Vincent Barringer has disputed the claim.

Barringer complained at Tuesday night's organizational meeting of the Olive Town Board, "We are paying somebody else's bill."

He insisted that at least one recipient listed "did not live in the town" at the time the county authorized the person's eligibility.

Last night's meeting, held in Shokan, drew an audience of 50 persons. Discussion, which proceeded the official meeting, centered around the recently passed local snowmobiling law. The board voted to table any action until the next meeting, so members can gauge the affects of the new law on local residents.

Barringer also announced the opening of town ice skating rinks at the Shokan and West Shokan parks. The rinks are located under the pavilions in the parks, and are open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. "The town bought liners," Barringer said, "and has been slowly building up the ice, so that four inches now exist." He also noted that snow fences around the rinks prevent blowing snow from building up on the skating surfaces.

The annual audit of town bills revealed an actual fund balance of $67,246. "We've established a capital fund for landfill purposes," Barringer said, "with part of this money, and the rest will be used towards this year's general fund." The landfill will open for expanded hours on a seven-day, eight-hour basis, he said.

Yearly reports were given of each of the town committees by the various councilmen at the session. Councilman Peter Tosi reported that an overall plan for the Shokan park has been completed and will be used for the development of the site. Councilman Robert Adsit said another full-time constable was being hired to afford more protection to the town. His hours will be variable, but will be concentrated at high crime times. Appointed to the position was George Haas of Boiceville at an annual salary of $7,000.

Donald Beesmer reported that his recent complaints about the county highway department had met with some success. That department, he said, "has committed itself to making certain improvements in the town as the board had previously requested."

Robert Burgher of West Shokan noted some progress on the Traver Hollow Bridge. He said bids would be let by the end of January or early February to make the present bridge into a detour while a new bridge is being constructed. He was not, however, able to give a definite date for its reopening.

The board appointed Jack Molloy as a full-time assessor at a salary of $12,000 per year, and noted the assessor's office would be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, and from 7 to 9 p.m. each Thursday, as well as other times by appointment.

The salary of town highway workers was set as previously agreed in the contract negotiated last year. Workers will receive a wage increase of 22 cents per hour. The salary of part-time constables was set at $3.50 per hour.

The supervisor noted that anti-recession money provided by the state was being used to increase constable protection in the town.

Meeting days for the entire calendar year were also set by the board. The board will meet in regular session on the first Tuesday night of each month, with the exception of November, when the 1977 session will be held on the second Tuesday night.

Barringer also announced the town had saved approximately $2,000 by hiring attorneys on a fee basis instead of appointing one town counsel. This practice will continue for the coming year, he said.

Other appointments made by the board included a civil defense director, two deputy town clerks, a publicity clerk, and a registrar of vital statistics. Robert Burgher was reappointed to the planning board and Evelyn Lang to the recreation commission, with the terms of both to run for seven years.

The board will fill two additional vacancies on the planning board at its February meeting. That meeting is set for Feb. 1 at Veterans Hall, Shokan, and all interested persons are urged to attend.

Saugerties GOP Backs Catalinotto

SAUGERTIES — The Town of Saugerties Republican Committee has endorsed Michael E. Catalinotto for chairman of the Ulster County Republican Committee.

Paul Pavlovich, vice-chairman of the committee, said the vote to support Catalinotto by the 32-member group, was "overwhelming and enthusiastic." He noted the group's sentiment was that Catalinotto "has been a dynamic and energetic leader, who has demonstrated organizational ability and political leadership."

Those qualities, the committee felt, would "strengthen the County Republican Committee." Pavlovich also said that, in talking to committeemen throughout the county, he has been assured that Catalinotto, a Saugerties attorney, had "widespread support."

Pavlovich said he's confident Catalinotto will be elected by a comfortable margin over Kenneth Whispell, Town of Ulster resident, who has also announced for the post. A full committee vote on the new leadership of the county GOP, following the recent resignation of long-time chairman Albert Spada, will come at a meeting Friday night.

County Land Use Plan Outlined

KINGSTON — A land use plan for Ulster County is being prepared by Planning Director Herbert Hekler and his staff and will be available for a public hearing some time in April.

Hekler outlined major items in the plan at Wednesday night's Ulster County Planning Board meeting. Land use will be divided into five categories: urban, including major residential and industrial uses, with municipal water and sewers; suburban, including medium density residential subdivisions, neighborhood commercial areas with municipal water and sewers; rural, including individual residences and small settlements with individual wells and sewage systems; agricultural, including irreplaceable farming regions, orchards and bottomlands; and environmentally sensitive areas of steep slopes, wetlands, public lands and higher elevations.

The plan will have a major impact on planning where applications for federal funds are involved. In addition to providing the basis for review of projects which must comply with the plan to qualify for federal aid, the plan will serve as the board's guide in reviewing local plans, zoning ordinances, amendments and local board referrals and will be the basis for recommendations on county and state facilities, highway improvements, park acquisitions and other public projects.

County planning board denial of a local referral means that a local board, to override it, must have a majority plus one (four votes on a five-member board) instead of a simple majority.

Hekler noted that the Village of Saugerties had to accept sewage from Barclay Heights and the City of Kingston had to accept sewage from the Town of Esopus, as recommended by county planners, to qualify for federal aid for their treatment plant projects.

A definite date for the public hearing will be announced. Maps and summaries of the land use plan are available at the Ulster County Planning Board office in the County Office Building.

The board approved a special use permit that will permit Alfred Higley to add 60 feet to an existing meat processing plant in Boiceville. Planners recommended that one of three entrances to the plant from Rt. 28 be closed and that Higley consult with the Department of Transportation about problems caused by cars backing from the parking lot onto Rt. 28. A one-way entrance and exit system was recommended.

The application of Jennie Levenson to convert 48 summer bungalows on Samsonville Road off Rt. 209 into low-cost housing units was referred back to local authorities. She had applied under provisions of the Farm and Rural Development Act to convert the bungalows into insulated year-round homes.

The board did not rule on the feasibility of her request, saying only that it would be premature to give a ruling before she had received approval from the local planning board, zoning board of appeals and the Ulster County Department of Health.

The board referred 14 other proposals back for local determination, saying they had no countywide impact.

County Lawmakers Convene Tonight

KINGSTON — The county legislature meets in its first session of the new year tonight and is expected to carry over some of last year's austerity measures.

Among the belt-tightening measures expected to be approved again for 1977 are legislative control over the promotion and hiring of county employees, the purchase of equipment in county departments and the freeze of contractual expense accounts for the agencies.

What all this means is that department heads will have to come before their respective legislative committees and then the entire legislature to get approval for any but the most ordinary of moves in the operations.

It's something they've been living with for about nine months now and although the county's budget officers say they've no idea just how much actual savings was incurred by the austerity measures, many legislators feel that the policy has at least kept the lid on spending.

Also up for approval at the meeting will be funding for several Youth Bureau programs, including the Big Brothers, Big Sisters organizations, the YWCA Teen Mothers Program and the Kingston Boys Club.

A number of annual appointments and designations also will come up at the organizational meeting — the first one which newly-elected Chairman Ernest Gardner (R-Dist.8) and Majority Leader Melvin Mones (R-City) will preside.

The session begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Ulster County Office Building and is open to the public.

Seven More Burglaries in City

KINGSTON — Burglaries persist in plaguing the City of Kingston where seven more are under investigation this week, including the loss of a safe with $4,300 worth of cash and jewelry from the residence of Michael Andrews, 37 Wall St., Wednesday night.

The safe's contents included old and new $2 bills, coins and a ring. Entry into the house is believed to have been between 10:30 and 11:50 p.m.

City detectives are also investigating the theft of tools from the construction site of the Rondout National Bank on the corner of Washington and Hurley Avenues. The theft was reported by C. B. Strain and Son, a contractor.

Twalfskill Country Club was entered between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Ten cases of beer, three bottles of champagne and four sections of redwood fencing were reported missing.

A burglary at Lakeview Medical Laboratory Wednesday netted thieves cash and checks amounting to $1,444.50 and an entry in the law office building of S. James Matthews on John Street, by forcing a rear door, meant the loss of an AM-FM receiver.

Detectives are also investigating a reported burglary at Colony Liquor Distributors. It has not been determined at this time what was taken.

Armed Robbery

Ellenville State Police are investigating the armed robbery Wednesday night of the BP service station on Route 52 in Ellenville in which $40 was taken and a safe in the building went untouched.

The 8 p.m. holdup occurred when two white males walked around the station from the rear and entered through the front door.

Holding a single barrelled shotgun at the station attendant, they relieved him of the $40 and tied him up with a clothesline they brought with them. The two suspects fled on foot.

Still bound by the line, the unnamed attendant hopped out of the station and flagged down a passing motorist who freed him.

Police are looking for a six-foot one man weighing between 150 and 160 pounds, age about 17 or 18, wearing a green and white ski mask, green army fatigue jacket with hood, grey and green sweat shirt and green wool gloves.

The second suspect is described as being about 5-foot six, weighing 140 to 150 pounds, wearing a similar mask, blue hooded sweat shirt, green fatigue jacket and black leather gloves.

which developed the 116-acre Broadway East area as its first major renewal project, for several years has had an agreement with Hurley Real Estate Corp., an ad hoc consortium of businessmen interested in putting a shopping center just south of the new city hall.

Although those plans lay fallow for several years, Koenig said he had hoped that this year's construction of the north-south arterial bridge and highway into Broadway East would spark the shopping center construction nearby.

His plan was to enter an agreement with the new Ulster County Industrial Development Agency so that community development funds would provide low-interest loans to build the shopping center at a net rental rate of $2 per square foot instead of the current $7 or $8.

HUD's decision against the plan "sort of sets you back a little bit, but it's not going to stop us from following through as much as we can to bring this shopping center about this year," Koenig said.

Several housing projects and new municipal buildings have been constructed in Broadway East, but the shopping center is the key project that hasn't materialized in the $12 million renewal program.

The best-dressed-of-the-day award went to the seemingly eternal columnist and TV game show personality Kitty Carlisle, who glided through the masses in a deep violet silk frock, matching lizard pumps and pearls to her seat in the VIP corner.

The general reaction to the Carey speech seemed to waver between lukewarm and cool among the throngs slowly streaming out of the two hour session.

It was as though no one had anything really good to say about the pep-talk, so they weren't commenting at all.

Hinchey, sniffling badly from a cold he picked up hiking through the woods with his sons last weekend, thought the most promising point Carey made was a promise not to "follow the paths of the past."

"That whole concept of reducing the size of government, phasing out departments that are no longer needed and focusing more on building up the private sector and less on constructing marble monuments is something that I personally favor," he said.

But despite the recent upsurge in business, Price is not optimistic about the small businessmen's chances for survival in Kingston.

"The big problem is that a lot of small stores can't or won't accept credit cards and a lot of the corporate wives in this community don't carry cash. These wives, who are usually attractive, well educated women, have married some dull corporate guy and to compensate for the poor choice of a husband, they go out and spend and charge and never look at a price tag. When the bills come 'El Dullito' might get upset for a little while, but he pays up."

since there are no plans on the table—and trafficking in the environment for potential private gain is not to be tolerated."

Bell insisted, however, that he and his partners had no condominium plans, since "the economy justifies no development right now." They had applied for the sewage permit several years ago, he said, when the economy was good and a multi-mix development of artists studios and senior citizen and low income housing had been explored. Because of the money and effort that had gone into the application, he said, they felt the project should be kept alive.

Estates engineer Mario Scavuzzo spent close to two hours on the stand explaining that the biodesic treatment plant operation proposed was a modern, efficient, full proof process that would provide all effluent limitations set by the DEC. Kwak seemed to support that contention when he said, "This is the strictest permit that I have ever had a chance to write or review."

But the plant was criticized by the audience as "a Rubie Goldberg construction," and some questioners drew the admission from Kwak that small, packaged plants of the type "very often fail, have a bad record, and are more of a headache to the DEC than a big municipal plant."

Among the more vocal opponents were:

•Alfred Robinson, poet-playwright, who said Woodstock was "already an open sewer and the permit would violate what little is left of the integrity of our local environment." He called the plant "a high-handed attempt by a high-handed cabal."

•David Ballantine, author and gunsmith, who demeaned the Estates presentation as "very clever airbrush work that looked like Disneyland." He maintained there was not enough water flow in the brook "to support gondolas and steamboats," and said that in dry or drought periods, "the town would live to regret the fact that there was nothing in the stream effluent."

GOP Ready for Change

Refreshing winds of change seem to be breezing through the Ulster County Republican Party as the GOP prepares to choose its new county chairman on Friday.

In the wake of November's election disasters, both the party "Old Guard" and dissatisfied "grass roots" factions are singing new themes. Saugerties attorney Michael Catalinotto, who has the backing of such established party powers as H. Clark Bell, and Kenneth Whispell, the county's super-intendant of buildings who believes he represents the "little people" among party workers, are both promising to make the party organization more open to young people and more responsive to the rank-and-file.

The GOP inner circle which for years has dominated Ulster County politics is, in a sense, pleading guilty to accusations that it has become too rigid, ingrown and smug.

But, as the traditional womb and rearing-place of the county's most prominent political leaders and public officials, the party elite still believes it is best equipped to lead the party through the promised reforms.

Backed by that elite, Catalinotto has promised if he is named chairman to consult the committeemen before making appointments and policy decisions. He has promised to actively recruit young people to the party, to aim at the intellects of county voters instead of their emotions, and to be more open with the press.

Obviously these pledges are carefully tailored to counter Whispell's broad-based appeal within party ranks.

Many party regulars give Catalinotto high marks for brains and energy and see him as the kind of man the GOP needs to recharge its faltering strength and influence. But the yearning for change may run too deep within the county organization for Catalinotto to overcome.

"Throw the bums out!" seems to be the prevailing sentiment among Whispell supporters who believe their man is more naturally inclined than Catalinotto and his backers to work openly, without personal ambition and without insulating himself within a clique.

On the other hand some Republicans feel that Whispell, as superintendant of county buildings, would find himself in an awkward position as party chairman. Though none question his honesty, they fear he would be open to charges of conflict of interest in his role as a large purchaser of building materials, labor and supplies from local contractors who might also be contributors to the GOP.

The first real test of the promises to let the rank and file wield more influence will come tomorrow night even before the new chairman is chosen. Whether the voting is open or by secret ballot, some committeemen feel, will show whether the party powers are still determined to keep the rank-and-file in line or now are willing to let them exercise their wishes without looking over their shoulders.

Whichever man wins, he'll have a big job to do. The pledges to open the GOP to wider participation and free debate will have to be made good if the party is to maintain its strength. If he can succeed, the new chairman will be doing a service to all Ulster County citizens.

Freeman Readers Write

Whispell Support Is Strong

Dear Editor:

This letter is to inform you and your readers of the Town of Ulster Republican Committee's position with respect to the vacancy in the office of Ulster County Republican Chairman, and to clarify several other items that appeared in the Jan. 4 Daily Freeman page one article on this subject.

The article, written by Chazy Dowaliby of your staff, gives the impression that Mr. Kenneth Whispell has only limited support among the Town of Ulster Committeemen. This is not the case. The minutes of the Dec. 28, 1976 meeting of the Town of Ulster Republican Committee show that Mr. Whispell was unanimously endorsed for the office of Ulster County Republican Chairman by all 21 committeemen present. This endorsement followed a thorough, open discussion and review of the qualifications offered by the potential candidates who had contacted Mr. Joseph Lohmaier, our Town Chairman.

Later personal conversations I have had with several members of the County Committee, including committeemen from the Town of Saugerties and City of Kingston, indicated to me that support for Mr. Whispell's opposition is not at all solid in those areas, and that support for Mr. Whispell and his programs goes far beyond the towns of Ulster, Kingston, and a section of Wawarsing as stated in the article.

Incidentally, Article 3, Section 3 of the Rules and Regulations of the Ulster County Republican Committee specifies that should a vacancy occur in the office of Chairman, a new chairman must be elected at a meeting called within 30 days from the date such vacancy shall have occurred. Since Mr. Spada submitted his resignation on or about Dec. 21, 1976, and since a resignation so submitted must be effective as of the date of submission, not at some future date, the County Committee meeting to elect his replacement had to be scheduled on or before Jan. 20, 1977. The County Committee meeting scheduled for Jan. 7 conforms with these rules. I know of no attempt to "move up" the date of the meeting from some later date as implied in the article.

Boycott Coffee; Drink Tea!

Dear Editor:

The OPEC cartel is not the only group looting the American pocket-book. Now, we have the Organization of Coffee Exporting Countries (OCEC) which has raised the price of coffee beyond the reach of our coffee pots.

There is only one thing to do: paraphrase Marie Antoinette, "If they can't afford coffee, let them drink tea," or milk or martinis.

Now is the time for all good Americans to come to the aid of the party, the New Paltz Tea Party, which will shine in our history books with the Boston Tea Party, as another example of resistance to unjust taxation, which is what is happening with the price-fixed gouging by the OCEC cartel.

Coffee drinkers of New Paltz unite! You have nothing left if you don't.

An Incredible Appointment

The designated members of Mr. Carter's new Cabinet, and the key members of his staff, are being examined taxonomically — in the same way that one would read the ethnic profile of a political ticket. There has got to be a Catholic, a Jew, an Italian, a black woman: the list is of course potentially endless. The Kennedy's being something of a genus in American politics, it is now a necessity to appoint a "Kennedyite" to a special position, and the choice on the current roster is Theodore Sorenson. Mr. Sorenson is brilliantly qualified, having had close personal and professional ties with John Kennedy, for whom he also wrote speeches — including, paradoxically, the most bellicose passage of the famous inaugural address in which President Kennedy expressed a national itch to send the Marines anywhere in the world where the candle of freedom flickered.

Paradoxical because Mr. Sorenson is nowadays identified as the mother hen of the doves. He is widely identified with the movement to grant instant amnesty to those who broke ranks during the Vietnam war, and until there is evidence to the contrary one assumes that Mr. Sorenson is taking a moral rather than a pragmatic position. That, at any rate, is the reason why Senator Henry Jackson opposed the nomination of Mr. Sorenson as head of the Central Intelligence Agency: which appointment was, to quote Senator Taft on the choice of Mr. Durkin as Dwight Eisenhower's Secretary of Labor in 1952, "an incredible appointment."

The thing about Sorenson is that he is, above all, a moralist. Now that is not all bad. Indeed, at a certain level it can be thought to be all good. Moralists set the tone for society. And ultimate questions inure of something only whether it is good or evil, all other questions being essentially clerical.

On a recent morning, at a newsstand in a Caribbean resort, two middle-aged Americans, clearly cosmopolitan by their appearance and accent, were looking over the smut counter, and the elder one said, "You're too moral to buy one of these." His companion said defensively: "I haven't had a moral thought since I was 16." Everyone in the area laughed. I didn't, and neither would Sorenson have laughed.

But Sorenson has been appointed to head up the CIA. And the CIA is not an organization brought together to ponder moral problems. When the late John L. Lewis was told that the Ethical Practices Committee of the AFL-CIO had sent three days in closed chambers, he sent over the message: "Have you discovered any ethical practices yet?"

The CIA is an organization which accepts presumptively the moral right of the United States to survive, and the derivative tactical necessity to maneuver in a world thoroughly uninhabited by moralists.

About a year ago, Mr. Sorenson addressed a distinguished gathering to give his views on the subject of the bribing of foreign officials by American corporation executives. While he acknowledged the complexity of the problem, his remedy was categorical. He would favor legislation making it a crime under American law for an American to bribe any official anywhere in the world, never mind the circumstances. Toward the end of the afternoon, one could close one's eyes and hear Cotton Mather speaking. Cotton Mather, given the century he lived in, was not all that bad: but he would never have done as head of a swinging intelligence agency.

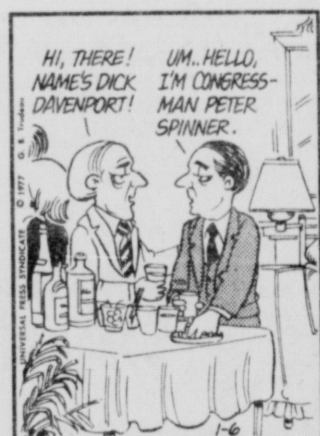

Ted Sorenson is a deeply intelligent man, and he would have no difficulty at all in comprehending the nature of the problem. He is probably even skilled in self-analysis. But the temperamental strain of needing to overcome inclinations so marked could bring on an immobilizing organizational strain, or in any event render the CIA less than as useful as it ought to be. What characteristically then happens is that other organizations begin, out of necessity, to do work which is considered essential. The Army, the Navy, the State Department, the Bureau of Customs. . . .

Mr. Sorenson will be thoroughly interrogated. But he is not likely to have much difficulty. It is hard to put questions to him of a hypothetical kind that would highlight his problem. He is the best authority in the matter, and his acceptance of Mr. Carter's nomination suggests one of two things: a) that he believes he can overcome his inclination to moral judgement, or b) that he is pleased that he now had the authority to bring his moral affluence to bear on the CIA the better to neutralize it.

Cleaning up White-Collar Justice

WASHINGTON - The inside story of Watergate by John Dean, who went to jail for his role in it, is higher this week on the best-seller list than an account of those same events by the prosecutor who helped send him there, Leon Jaworski.

A number of reputable people, including some conservative columnists, are pressing President Ford to pardon the Watergate thugs still in prison with the argument they did less willful damage than the Vietnam draft dodgers, to whom President-elect Carter plans to give amnesty.

Ex-President Nixon, the only one of the Watergate crowd to currently possess a pardon, sits in San Clemente hinting darkly of returning to the public scene in some prestigious official capacity, as befitting his former title.

Meanwhile, a local district court judge has just imposed astonishingly stiff jail sentences upon two young people who embezzled from their employers, with the complaint that white-collar criminals have been getting off too easily in the past.

And U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger in his annual year-end report on the judiciary objected to the wide disparities in criminal sentences for similar crimes, an observation he confined to similarly situated defendants but which could easily have much broader application. Obviously, the quality of justice meted out to criminal defendants is pretty much in the eye of the beholder. Too much judicial flexibility has led to arbitrary results, particularly in the treatment of those convicted of so-called white-collar crimes like fraud or political corruption, which do not involve violence.

On the one hand, it appears to serve no humane purpose to send a community leader of previously unsullied reputation, who is of no continuing danger to others, to an overcrowded prison hellhole. On the other, it doesn't seem fair for such a person to get lighter punishment because he is richer or more powerful than some poor bloke who could only employ the same greedy instincts by robbing others on the streets.

The most interesting development in this area is alternative sentencing, an effort to punish the white-collar criminal sufficiently to deter others, but at the same time gain some community good. Instead of prison, judges have imposed terms of charity or environmental work.

One of the most notable examples of such experimental sentencing occurred in a case involving price-fixing in the paper label industry. U.S. District Court Judge Charles Renfrow of San Francisco imposed stiff fines on the convicted executives and then required each of them to speak before at least 12 civic and business groups about their offenses and subsequent experience with the criminal justice system.

Recently, Judge Renfrow completed a study of the impact of his unique sentencing, and came to the conclusion he didn't know if he'd want to do it again.

The judge sent a questionnaire to all business, civic and educational groups which had heard one of the court-ordered presentations, plus a variety of legal experts knowledgeable in anti-trust. He felt it "significant" that many of those in the audiences had said they were prompted to make an extra effort in their own companies to comply with federal anti-trust laws.

But respondents found it difficult to accept the new concept, criticizing him both for being too lenient and too harsh. Not surprisingly, the businessmen and corporate counsels who responded liked the lighter sentence idea. Law professors and his fellow judges weren't very keen on it.

Renfrow decided that perhaps the greatest value in the experiment was in stimulating widespread discussion of the inequities and problems of criminal justice in white-collar areas like anti-trust. Which, of course, leaves us a bit more enlightened but no closer to a truly fair and even-handed system.

Nixon Bypassed Merit Plan

WASHINGTON — The last of the Watergate investigations, an exhaustive, year-long probe of Richard Nixon's efforts to circumvent the federal merit system, has just been completed.

According to the confidential findings, the Nixon White House set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of applicants for government jobs.

The applications were processed by a special White House Personnel Operation, which was established to tighten the Nixon grip on the federal bureaucracy. The politically favored applicants would be ranked, depending on how influential their backers were.

Then the White House would plant them in key career jobs which, under the law, were supposed to be awarded according to merit. The hiring was arranged through a network of centrally controlled "special referral units," which operated quietly inside various government agencies.

Even more shocking, top officials of the Civil Service Commission condoned and even participated in the political manipulations. They not only were aware of the illegal patronage system but used it themselves. Yet they are responsible for safeguarding the merit system.

These startling findings, perhaps the last echo of the Watergate years, are contained in a report by the House subcommittee on manpower and civil service. The painstaking study, which hasn't yet been released to the public, outlined how the Nixon administration tried to restore the discredited political spoils system, which was abolished 94 years ago.

According to the study, political favoritism in the civil service system reached a peak during the Nixon years, 1969 through 1973. Here's how it worked:

Patronage units were set up within each federal agency to find positions for individuals who were given a "preferred" status by the White House Personnel Operation.

The applications had to be forwarded to the Civil Service Commission, of course, for approval. But top CSC officials, instead of policing the illegal preferential hiring, aided and abetted it. Using their own "pink-tag" system to segregate the favored applications, they helped to expedite them.

The subcommittee report charges that Commissioner Ludwig J. Andolsek was personally responsible for expediting 100 to 300 special pink-tag cases. In one case, Chairman Robert Hampton intervened at the request of a former congressman for one of the ex-congressman's relatives.

As an example of how the patronage system operated, the study cites the General Services Administration, which hired more than 300 employees through the patronage system.

One GSA official gave an affidavit that he had been instructed by his superiors to hire a driver for former Attorney General John Mitchell during a hiring spree.

The official said he was also directed to hire the sons of two former Nixon cohorts, ex-Attorney General Richard Klindienst and ex-Budget Director George Shultz. For Shultz, testified the GSA aide, "we established a job we did not need and at a location of his choosing."

Yet six weeks earlier, the GSA had dropped a custodial laborer with nine children from the payroll, because there was no money to pay his salary.

Nixon's first GSA chief, Robert Kunzig, came out of the Pennsylvania Republican organization. He allegedly established a special "Pennsylvania Connection," through which Pennsylvanians received preferential treatment.

According to the report, Pennsylvania's powerful senators, Hugh Scott and Richard Schweiker, sent 91 and 130 job referrals, respectively, to GSA. One applicant recommended by Schweiker, Jack LeMay, played an active role in the patronage operation.

At the Health, Education and Welfare Dept., patronage placements were made by the Office of Special Projects. This was a special political office which was set up, according to a confidential memo, to serve "as a central point of contact on all politically sensitive matters which ought not be broached through regular Department channels."

The office was headed temporarily by a political commissar, named Sam Schulhof, who explained his function to Undersecretary Frank Carlucci in this confidential language: "Patronage, 'information,' 'advice,' 'political coordination' and 'quiet implementation' are key words which describe our mission."

The office checked the political philosophies of hundreds of job applicants and even contract applicants. This political skulduggery was kept so secret that the Office of Special Projects wasn't listed on HEW's official organizational chart.

The reason, according to the Schulhof memo, was "The sensitivity of its functions and, frankly, an unwillingness of anyone to really admit parental lineage."

Footnote: A CSC spokesman told our associate Larry Kratochewski that neither Chairman Hampton nor Commissioner Andolsek had ever "exerted pressure on anyone" to procure jobs for favored individuals, although Hampton acknowledged that referrals he before 1974 "might well have had the appearance of impropriety." A spokesman for Sen. Schweiker insisted it was "proper and legitimate" to help constituents find government jobs. We were unable to reach Scott for his comment.

Sexual Equality Is Sexual Absurdity

At the risk of being called a male chauvinist, and a pig to boot, I would express with reasonable certainty the personal belief that all the power and glory of the United States Government cannot make equals of women and men.

Equality is a noble concept. Equality of blacks and whites, poor and rich, women and men. The concept is fundamental to democratic government. As with all things, however, equality pushed to the point of absurdity surely will destroy the concept itself.

By definition, women and men are not the same, and for the government to try to make them so is more than absurd. It is obscene. There was a porno air about the Supreme Court the other day when the nine old men addressed the issue of whether women and men are equals, despite anatomical differences, because women are capable of becoming pregnant and men are capable of having circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies.

Politicians will promise anything, of course, and Congress in many laws has promised women equality with men in employment, education, voting and all else politicians can reach. The laws assume that men by nature discriminate against women, and it is government's duty to stop invidious sex discrimination.

Nature being what it is, men undoubtedly have discriminated against women and, government being what it is, Congress undoubtedly can make women the equals of men in the voting booth and other places where, as the bureaucrats say, sex is inoperative. Absurdity begins where sex begins. It is dumb for government to order integration of girls' and boys' gym classes. It is stupid for government to outlaw all-boy choirs. Boys and girls are different, and men and women are more different.

It is absurd and obscene for government to declare women and men equals because women become pregnant and men have circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies. But government has tried to push employment equality to that absurdity.

Congress decreed in the 1964 Civil Rights

Act that employers cannot discriminate on account of "race, color, religion, sex or national origin." In further refining sex discrimination, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission decreed that employers discriminate when they recognize pregnancy. And so the issue was joined: If employers provide disability insurance to men, does the law require disability insurance for pregnant women?

The Supreme Court pondered and decided. Six of the nine old men held that the denial of disability insurance for pregnancy is not discriminatory because women are different than men. Three felt that women are no different than men, inasmuch as women become pregnant whereas men have circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies.

The absurdity is not in the decision, but in the fact that the issue came before the Supreme Court. Women's rights will march on, despite the decision. Congress can and probably will override the decision and proceed to still greater absurdities.

If I stand accused of being a male chauvinist pig, my defense is not that women are not the equals of men. I know some women who are more than the equals of men. My defense is that when equality is pushed to absurdity, the concept itself is endangered.

The concept of equality, in the Constitution and in law grew from discrimination against blacks. The civil rights amendments to the Constitution, ratified by Civil War, speak of discrimination "on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude," and speak not of sex.

The 1964 Civil Rights Act was directed primarily at racial discrimination.

Racial equality has come a long way and has a long way still to go. But the march toward racial equality has slowed as the drive for sexual equality has speeded. As absurdity overtakes sexual equality, the entire concept of equality is discredited, and if equality is fundamental to democratic government, democracy is discredited too.

Jail Diet Rights

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The county jail has been ordered to provide salt-and-sugar-free peanut butter for a man who claims his constitutional right to freedom of religion is violated by the jail's regular diet.

District Court Judge William Neighbors Wednesday ordered the jail to buy the special peanut butter and also provide shredded wheat cereal for Perry Eoveno, 25, at every meal. Neighbors said his order would be effective until the religious issues are settled at a later hearing.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed suit Tuesday on behalf of Eoveno, who is serving a two-year term for attempted burglary. The suit claimed Eoveno's religion, Spiritual Naturopathy, prevents him from eating the jail's diet and asked he be supplied with a special diet for the remainder of his sentence.

Battery-Run Cars?

Jimmy Carter is inheriting a country that has been living in a fool's paradise. It had its scare in 1973 when the Arabs cut off the oil supply, but when the crisis passed it renewed its romance with the big car at a price it seems willing to pay.

The result is a waste all around. Money that goes into high cost energy isn't available for beer and skittles. It goes to OPEC countries whose per capita income has suddenly jumped ahead of that of the U.S. (In Kuwait the figure per person is $11,510; in the U.S., it's $7,060.) But the OPEC nations' people aren't getting much out of their monetary riches; their rulers keep putting the new-found money into fighter planes and missiles, with new little balances of terror growing up under the umbrella of the big U.S.-Soviet balance of terror.

So the world, whether it's West or East, First, Second or Third, grows poorer all around. But not everything is hopeless. For one thing, there are the nibblers who persist in experimenting at the edge of things. They are finding new ways of squeezing oil from old fields. Every time you write about what one nibbler is doing, you hear of others.

The development of a long-term battery is one project of the nibblers. They've already made one for atomic submarines, but since it involves using silver in a silver-zinc combination it's too expensive for an automobile. Other experiments are being made with a lithium-metal sulfide coupling, a sodium-sulfur linkage, and a sodium-antimony trichloride mix. For use in an electric car these have disadvantages ranging from cost to the size of packaging. None of them seem as far along as a zinc-chloride battery on which the Occidental Oil Company and Gulf and Western Industries, teaming up as Energy Development Associates, have spent $12 million of their own money.

This zinc-chloride battery, using a safe form of chlorine, was put in a Vega some five years ago, and it ran the car 152 miles on a single proving ground test at a 50-mile clip. The trouble was that the battery with its chlorine hydrate took up an inordinate amount of space in the car. But now it is more compact and on its way to meeting the criterion set by Gulf and Western's Dr. Milton Hollander, who would refuse to buy an automobile that didn't have room for golf bags.

The first use of the zinc-chloride, long-life battery will probably be for so-called load levelling in public utilities. It will be tested at the Public Service Electric and Gas company in Hillsboro, New Jersey, within two years. The idea is to store up a reserve of electric current in the battery during the offpeak utility hours, and then to use it to meet surges in weekend demand. If all works out as is expected, the savings on power company operating costs - and fuel - will be enormous.

Since utilities are turning more and more to coal, their use of long-lived storage batteries for load levelling would not have much impact on the nation's oil bill. The really constructive use of the battery would be for transportation. By the time it will take to develop a totally designed electric car, there will be 32 million U.S. households with two or more cars. If a quarter of the multiple cars in use were battery powered, the savings in gasoline would exceed 17 million gallons a day. And the savings would be net, for the car batteries would be recharged in basements at night by electric power generated from coal, or possibly nuclear, fuels.

Electric batteries are already powering postal vans and other stop-and-go delivery trucks in American cities. But delivery van range is necessarily limited by the short-term batteries that are now in use. With a zinc-chlorine battery, a four-passenger commuter vehicle could go up to 200 miles on a single charge at an average 50-mile an hour speed.

Taciturnity Pays Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, from all indications, will go down in history as an activist lame duck.

Already Ford's last 79 days are being compared to Franklin Roosevelt's first 100 days. And he still has a couple of weeks to go.

Since his defeat last November, Ford has proposed such far-reaching measures as gasoline price decontrol and statehood for Puerto Rico.

Some observers have expressed puzzlement over why he would bother making moves of this magnitude at such a late date. But I think I know the reason.

To me, it looks very much as if he is paying off campaign debts to the silent bandwagon.

In case you aren't familiar with this type of political favor, I should explain that the silent bandwagon is composed of prominent or influential figures who support a certain candidate but who keep mum about it.

The muteness is the helpful part.

For were they to support him openly, it could cost him a lot of votes and possibly even the election.

A good example of the silent bandwagon rider is Bobby Seale, one of the founders of the Black Panther Party and a defendant in the celebrated Chicago Seven trial.

Once Jimmy Carter's victory had been safely confirmed by the Electoral College, Seale called a news conference to reveal that he had been a covert supporter of the president-elect.

"I wanted him to win, so I kept quiet," he explained.

Now that Seale has broken the ice, many others who rode the silent bandwagon probably will be coming out of the closet.

The next step will be for political analysts to determine how much impact these sealed lip stalwarts had on the campaign.

It is too late for loyal tongueholders to lay claim to a Cabinet seat. But with many sub-Cabinet positions yet to be filled, they may yet have a voice in the transition process.

If Carter had silent bandwagon riders such as Seale, it is logical to assume there also were covert supporters in the Ford camp.

One might have been an oil executive whose company had admitted illegal contributions to the Nixon campaign or undetected payments overseas. Another could have been a Puerto Rican statehood advocate who for some reason was held in low public esteem.

Let's say they pay a call at the White House during the campaign. With the following results:

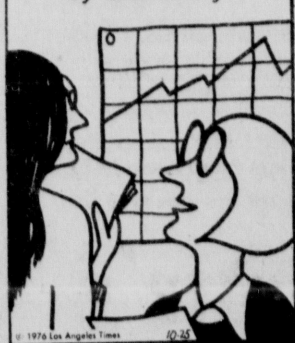

"Mr. President, we're here to assure you that we're behind you 100 per cent."

The president blanches.

"Would you mind keeping that under your hat?"

Even though he lost the election, a president would be an ingrate if he didn't seek some way to show his appreciation for their inaudible assistance.

Local woman named

By MARGERY MOSSMAN
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON—Nancy T. Riseley, president of the Ulster County Bar Association and newly appointed assistant district attorney, looks back on her beginnings as a lawyer and says, "I went to law school so I could get a job."

A surprising answer from someone who has been as hard-working and successful as Mrs. Riseley has, but a fact nonetheless.

Mrs. Riseley graduated from Skidmore College in 1965 with a degree in economics and no career in sight. In her own words: "I couldn't do anything. A liberal arts education prepares you for nothing."

Determined to make something of her life, Mrs. Riseley entered Albany Law School and graduated in 1968. "Some people enter law school because they need a career and they find they can't stay—the work is too demanding," says Mrs. Riseley, who enjoyed the challenge. Law school was only the beginning of a career that demands an extraordinary amount of dedication, constant work and long hours. "If you look in the windows of law offices on Green Street and uptown Kingston, you'll see one out of every two has lights on after 6 p.m.," says the pert, 33-year-old attorney citing an example of the extra work lawyers must do if they are to be successful. "People don't realize how difficult this kind of job is."

Mrs. Riseley is particularly resentful of the bad reputation the public has attributed to lawyers since Watergate—and the two Ulster County judges on trial now haven't helped any. "This is a bad time for lawyers, but we are trying to maintain our image," explains Mrs. Riseley with dignity. "There are extremely dedicated lawyers here in Ulster County, but bad press overshadows the good things we've done." Because law is such a confidential business, coverage of positive occurrences is difficult. The Bar Association doesn't advertise itself, and people can't possibly know what individual attorneys are doing that's good.

Mrs. Riseley also points out that people do a great deal of complaining about lawyers' fees without realizing how little of each fee is actually taken home by the attorney. "Some people think that all we do is rush into the courtroom, say a few words, leave again, and that's it."

She describes the reality of law practice in the words of Abraham Lincoln: "An attorney's time is his stock and trade."

Besides the "tremendous overhead" a lawyer must pay for the upkeep of his or her office, an attorney's work hours are almost endless. Mrs. Riseley doesn't get home to her house in Krumville until almost 8 o'clock each night, and even then she's always "on call." People go to a lawyer because they have some kind of problem to be dealt with, and often clients under stress will call attorneys like Mrs. Riseley just to talk, to relieve anxieties.

Mrs. Riseley has never regretted her decision to become a lawyer. She has been in private practice for the past eight years—ever since she graduated law school. How does one acquire a private practice right out of school? "You hang up your shingle and go to work building up a reputation," explains the assistant D.A. with a simple shrug. But it wasn't easy.

Mrs. Riseley made her first attorney's fees serving as an assigned counsel for the county. Her job was to defend indigents in criminal cases. After the first two and a half years of private practice, the young attorney was appointed town justice for the Town of Olive. She served from 1972 to 1975, and then retired after one term to form a partnership with her husband, Attorney Richard F. Riseley Jr., at their present office on 111 Green St.

Mrs. Riseley has always served in some capacity in the Ulster County Bar Association, and she claims that working her way up to president for 1977 wasn't too difficult.

Her appointment as assistant D.A. was a much greater surprise. One day she received a call from District Attorney Frank Vogt, who asked her if she would be interested in taking

Life

Never regretted decision to become a lawyer

the job, Mrs. Riseley answered, "Sure!" She is pleased to note that Vogt, a registered Republican, chose her, a registered Conservative; and she now warmly refers to Vogt as the first "non-partisan D.A."

The new assistant D.A.'s position requires only part-time work, but Mrs. Riseley admits that she'll have to cut down on her private practice for the first time in her career. The county job requires her appearance in city court every morning, five days a week.

Back in the office, Mrs. Riseley is often asked how she fares in partnership with her husband in business and at home. "We get along excellently, which I am told is very unique," answers Mrs. Riseley happily. "Actually, we don't see each other as much as you would think." Mr. and Mrs. Riseley have their offices in separate rooms. They each have their own clients and do different kinds of work. "I have to make an appointment with my husband in order to discuss a case," explains the attorney, "and when we go out to lunch, we go with others. We're seldom alone."

"But we keep our business in the office and our personal lives at home. They are totally separate—and that's why it's worked so well. I guess it's because we have so much in common...."

What are the hobbies of a busy female attorney? "Eating and sleeping." That's about all Mrs. Riseley has time for. She appreciates any chance to relax, and finds cooking to be one of the most relaxing activities she does.

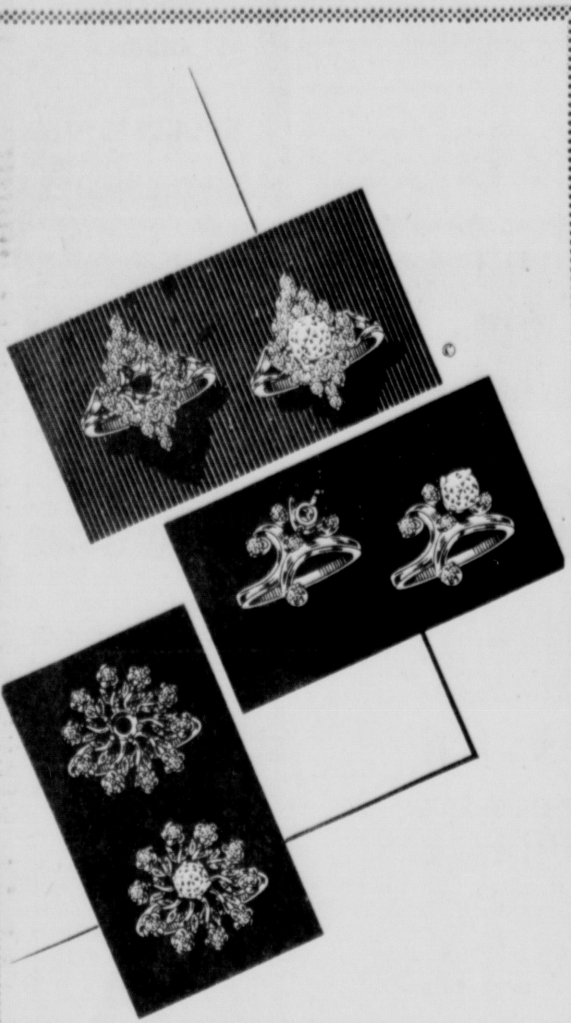

Life hasn't been simple for Mrs. Riseley since her decision to go to law school, but she still finds it easy to say, "I'm glad I did it!"

50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. T. Joseph Reis of Stout Avenue, Port Ewen, were guests of honor at a 50th wedding anniversary party held at The Hedges in West Park. The party was hosted by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Reis of Wilmington Del. Prior to the party, a Mass of Celebration was celebrated by the Rev. James W. Derrenbacher and the Rev. Thomas Loftus at the Church of The Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Port Ewen. Father Derrenbacher is a cousin of Mrs. Reis, the former Gertrude Beichert. The couple renewed their vows and received the Papal Blessing. William Powers Jr. of Kingston and John Beichert of Eastchester, great nephews, served the Mass. Their son served as lector and Mrs. Reis' brother, G. Knute Beichert, served as commentator. Ushers were Arthur Mulligan, cousin of Mr. Reis, and Gerard Beichert, both of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Reis were married at St. Peter's Church, Kingston, in 1926 by the Rev. John P. Neumann, now deceased. Attendants were Marie K. Barley, sister of Mrs. Reis, and Theodore Reis of Quogue, L.I. The couple has one granddaughter, Joanne Reis. Mr. Reis is retired from Hercules, Inc.

DEAR ABBY

Treating a Tramp Like A Lady...and Vice Versa

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to you a few years back asking why a married man would pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who was really a lady) like a tramp. Please try to locate it because your answer was one of the best things I've ever read, and I desperately need it now.—SAME BOAT IN ALLENTOWN

DEAR SAME: A sharp-eyed secretary with a mind like a steel trap found it, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Why will a married man pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp?—MINNIE

DEAR MINNIE: A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a lady.

He treats his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp because he feels that by degrading her he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty, so to get even with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please check this question with your medical advisers? I can't face my doctor with it and it has me worried.

Is it possible for damage to be done to a child if conception occurred while the parents were on a sandy beach and a grain of sand entered the woman's vagina and was carried into her womb with the sperm?

This didn't take place in a public area. It happened in private, but I have been worried about it ever since. Thank you.—WORRIED IN HAWAII

DEAR WORRIED: My medical advisers told me to tell you not to worry. (P.S. If it's a boy, name him "Sandy." If a girl, "Sandra.")

DEAR ABBY: We have two sons, 17 and 29. They aren't "bad," but they don't have any respect for me or anything I say.

When reprimanded, they both talk back to me and do as they please.

I've begged my husband to help me make these boys mind, but he has never been any help at all. When I threaten to leave unless he disciplines our sons, he says if I do, he'll throw them out, bag and baggage. I need help before it's too late.—NEEDS SUPPORT

DEAR NEEDS: It will comfort you little to be told that your sons have tuned you out years ago and have obviously gotten away with it.

Your husband's cop-out is shameful. Tell the boys that if they don't shape up, you will not put up with their loutish behavior one day longer than the law allows.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

AFS Seeking Host Families

RED HOOK—Local chapters of American Field Service International Scholarships are seeking families to host a foreign student for the 1977-78 school year. This year there are 18 foreign high school age students living with families in the mid-Hudson Valley.

"AFS seeks families with the ability to accept and appreciate others who are different in their cultures and values—families who have warmth, flexibility, curiosity, imagination, humor and perseverance," said Mrs. Sally Pulver, area representative. "Families who apply need not have high school age children of their own," she said, "All types of family groups are encouraged: single parent families, young parents, childless families and even 'grand-parent' families."

The host family receives no remuneration for hosting. The family provides room, board and the responsibility of being a host. The student receives a monthly allowance from AFS and medical expenses are provided, when needed.

The family is interviewed and an application is forwarded to AFS International headquarters in New York City. If accepted, a student is selected for that particular family on the basis of similar interests and personalities of the student and family. Orientation meetings are held for all host families prior to the students arrival during the summer. The local chapter keeps in constant contact with the host family during the entire year.

For further information on the AFS program and to learn how to host a foreign student, contact a local chapter, or high school, or write to Mrs. Sally Pulver, AFS Area representative, Pin Oak Drive, Red Hook, N.Y. 12571.

'Beginning Bard Abroad' Program

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON—A new one-semester program for freshmen to begin their college studies in Spain will be introduced next fall by Bard College.

The "Beginning Bard Abroad" program is intended to facilitate the early admission of seniors who have completed most of their high school requirements and to provide an alternative to the traditional classroom setting for the first college semester.

A limit of about 20 students will be admitted to the program as regular matriculated freshmen after rigorous academic and personal screening. Orientation will consist of an intensive two-week session on the Bard campus and a four-week introductory period in Spain. Tuition will be the same as for resident undergraduates.

Bard already has an early admission policy for qualified students but the new program, according to Dean of Academic Affairs Grace Allen, would be of particular benefit to gifted and talented students and will contribute to the better transition from secondary to college education.

The 16-credit program comprises seminars in politics, the arts, literature, and Spanish language instruction at introductory and intermediate levels. In addition, there will be possibilities for independent study to meet individual interests of students. The program will provide students with an introduction to the Bard liberal arts curriculum which features tutorials and independent study prominently.

The program was designed by Bard faculty members Dr. Mario Bick, professor of anthropology; Dr. Gladys Meyer, professor of sociology; and Dr. Justus Rosenberg, professor of romance languages and director of the "Beginning Bard Abroad" program.

Other locations, including Austria and Zaire, are expected to be included in an extended program in the future.

The Bard admissions office will begin accepting applications this month for the fall, 1977, semester in Spain.

Jane Pauley

Jane Pauley Is 'Today's' Woman

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — There she is — Jane Pauley — the all-American beauty from Indianapolis, "Today's" new woman, sitting ramrod-straight behind Barbara Walters' old desk, looking like a Vogue editorial for man-tailored suits, smiling an enigmatic, Mona Lisa smile, oozing self-confidence.

Pauley, 25, puffs a Kool with expertise until smoke smarts her eyes. Alas, she can't rub. Smudged eye makeup is totally inappropriate for television's newest morning star, rumored to be making $200,000 a year.

She claims the meteoric rise from relative anonymity to "Today" was not at her instigation. She says "they" called her, she didn't call "them." It has always been this way. She went from $13,500 a year on Indianapolis' WISH-TV to a $55,000 job at Chicago's WMAQ-TV. "It's safe to say I'm a fatalist," she says.

Now this — television's "au courant" Big Deal. Her attitude is definitely "que sera, sera." Says Jane, "Things have always worked out for me. Just when I began to consider my job drudgery and thought I was heading nowhere — something wonderful popped up. I've had precious little control over my life so far. Things have worked out despite me."

She winces at the suggestion that getting Barbara Walters' old job was a plum.

"NBC-TV did not play godmother to a would-be Cinderella," pouts Pauley. "I'm intelligent and competent. And I don't relish failure." She survived seven nerve-racking on-the-air "Today" tryouts, which ultimately landed her the job.

She is ambitious, but claims she didn't claw her way to this room at the top over such seasoned television journalists as Betty Furness, Betty Rollin and Cassie Mackin.

"I'm living proof that a woman doesn't have to grapple with barriers. At no time have I politicked for this job. I certainly haven't come to New York owing anyone any favors. In fact, I've never known a woman who had to compromise herself for a job."

Comparisons to Barbara Walters make supercool Pauley bristle. "Barbara Walters and I don't sound alike," she protests in diction that parallels her predecessor's. "And physical similarities are far-fetched and absurd."

Walters, she says crisply, had to be combative. "She came into the television industry when women weren't welcomed with open arms. But she didn't sell herself. She worked hard."

One of Pauley's first "Today" assignments was a recitation on "Winnie the Pooh;" she hugged a stuffed bear and made a saccharine speech. The cutesy segment didn't faze her sense of professionalism.

"Barbara Walters didn't begin her 'Today' career by interviewing Henry Kissinger and Anwar Sadat. She did fluff interviews many times a week. But she is remembered for her occasional hard-hitting interviews."

Pauley, an Indiana University graduate, won't discuss her salary. "I've read it's six figures," she says. "It wouldn't be good taste to be more specific."

She pays the transportation costs of her "best friend," Bill Shaw, 28, an Indianapolis reporter she sees every weekend. "I can afford these expenses and he can't." What does this do to her man's ego and self-pride? "Bill's attitude is that it's better to have a rich girl friend than a poor one," she says.

Is marriage in her future? "We have no serious plans. In fact I don't know if this will remain an exclusive relationship. Oh, maybe we'll survive this separation." The scuttlebutt is that Shaw is dating a newswoman in Indianapolis.

She says she's looked hard at herself in the mirror and: "I think I'm nice looking. I look like a person who'd be nice to know. The glamour people associate with me comes with the lights and the make-up."

Her parents, Richard and Mary Pauley of Indianapolis, are not "overwhelmed" by her overnight success. "But," she says, smiling, "if they read anything in the media that is anti-Jane, they chalk it up to slaphod reporting."

Her older sister Ann, a nuclear engineer in Pittsburgh, is the real "star" in the Pauley family. "I've often blaned my insecurities on Ann ... She was always A-plus-plus. I made good grades. She was ... perfection ..."

She says her father, an executive with Dean Foods of Indianapolis, inculcated her desire for achievement. "I wasn't openly rewarded for A's" she says. "The idea was always to do better." Her father was and is the "constant" in her life. "When it came to punishment and mother left the paddling to father, it was, well, just about the worst thing that could happen. If I displeased my father, I felt I wasn't good enough to be on God's earth."

Why Families Go Broke

We got a call the other day from our tax man, who said he was having problems with some of the figures on our return.

"It's your expenditures," he said. "They're way out of line. For example, you spent $15.36 on entertainment last year."

"That much?" I observed, peering over his shoulder. "Taxes on purchases only ran $48.12."

"That sounds right," nodded my husband.

"Your bank shows they paid $3.16 interest on your savings. So, where did all the money go?"

My husband took a deep breath and said, "We're the sole support of a 16-year-old driver who is insured."

"Oh, I am sorry," said our accountant, removing his glasses. "I didn't know."

"It's all right. We don't tell a lot of people. It's awkward when they press money into your hand and offer to help."

"A church group even offered to send us a basket."

"How much coverage do you carry?" asked the accountant.

"Liability, uninsured motorist, medical payments, collision, $50 deductible, and comprehensive ..."

"Good Lord, man, why didn't you say something? Poverty is one thing, but comprehensive ..."

"At first, when we applied for the insurance, I didn't think it was going to be this bad. Then the agent said, 'Does your son make good grades?'"

The kid only passed one test all year. His eye examination. Then he said, 'Does he smoke? Is he kind to his mother? Does he belong to a book club?'"

I thought two out of three wasn't bad, but he tacked on another fee."

"Does he live at home? That helps."

"Yes, but he drives a Z-28 Camaro."

"Don't say that!" said the tax man. "I've known presidents of corporations who can't afford the tab on a Z-28 Camaro."

"We tried to get him to marry just to lower the rates," I interrupted, "but there was only one girl he was interested in and he ran over her foot in the school parking lot."

"The premium on the tape deck was extra," said my husband sadly. "So was the CB radio."

"I'm going to give you the same advice I've given every other parent," said the accountant. "Get yourself an old, retired teenager who lives at home, has had driver's education, who is happily married, gets good grades, doesn't smoke, drives a station wagon, and hums. That'll be $50."

"Could we work something out?" asked my husband.

NEW PALTZ—The state environmental agency will offer a course for local residents and town officials on how to do a natural resource inventory.

Region 3 Department of Environmental Conservation Director Norman Van Valkenburgh has announced the program, which is aimed at persons involved or concerned about land-use planning.

According to Van Valkenburgh, the inventory is "equally a process and a product where by the resources within a particular village, town or county are identified, and recorded by using a data map with a series of overlays."

Components of the inventory can include soils, depth of bedrock, slope, water, open space and wetlands as well as cultural resources.

The course will be run on consecutive Tuesday nights beginning Jan. 11 to March 1, from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. at the DEC Regional Office in New Paltz.

The 1977 Natural Resource Inventory Course is the third such offering for Ulster County and was planned by representatives of a variety of local environmental and educational groups.

Goldwater Snubbed, Withdraws Support

Conservative-Moderate Battle over GOP National Chairman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A conservative-moderate battle over a new Republican National Chairman is on, with President Ford and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller backing Texas James Baker, Ford's presidential campaign manager.

Ford and Rockefeller met at the White House Wednesday with former Govs. Ronald Reagan of California and John Connally of Texas, both of whom said there was no agreement on who should succeed Mary Louise Smith when the Republican National Committee meets here Jan. 14-15.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, the party's 1964 presidential candidate, was so angered at not being invited to the party's "summit" council he declared he would never again raise funds for or otherwise help the GOP.

Several sources said the GOP meeting was held in a cordial atmosphere at which Ford strongly backed Baker. Rockefeller did not state a preference at the meeting, but his office later announced he would back whomever Ford wanted — without naming Baker.

Reagan reportedly told the other three that Baker was not acceptable, and his choice — and that of most sunbelt conservatives — was Utah State Chairman Richard Richards.

Connally was mum. He was once mentioned for the chairmanship and boosted by a group of southern GOP leaders. When Connally withdrew, they switched to former Sen. William Brock of Tennessee, who is now a full time contender for the post.

Baker, a young Houston lawyer, was never involved in a major national campaign before he served as Ford's chief delegate hunter and later campaign chairman last year.

A high White House source said Ford phoned Mrs. Smith after the lunch and told her he would support whomever the committee picks but that his preference is Jim Baker.

"It's the President's personal preference," the source said.

Rockefeller's backing was seen as a signal to liberal Republicans in the Northeast. Richard Rosenbaum, the New York State chairman and chairman of the Republican state chairmen, said in Albany he "strongly supported" the Ford-Rockefeller choice, without naming Baker.

There were also indications that Sen. Robert Dole, the unsuccessful GOP vice presidential candidate, would back Baker.

The first sign of a split among the GOP big four came when they refused to meet with reporters after the luncheon, as they had after a similar unity session last month.

Reagan did stop long enough to say there was no agreement.

"It's simply been left (that) any individual who wants to speak up can," Reagan said. "We believe it's the function of the national committee" to select a chairman.

Carter Choice Is Curtis

Democrats Will Name New Leader

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — In telegrams to all members of the Democratic National Committee, President-elect Jimmy Carter today recommended former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis as chairman.

Carter's endorsement makes the choice almost inevitable.

In recommending Curtis, Carter said "I know he shares my strong belief that the Democratic party must belong to the people and not just the political figures."

The President-elect, describing himself as the "party leader," urged the Committee to approve his choice when it meets Jan. 21 to select a successor to Chairman Robert Strauss, who is stepping down.

"The Democratic Party has gone through tremendous structural reform over the last eight years," Carter said.

"Ken Curtis would be a chairman who would continue and build on the work that we have accomplished and create strong new avenues of participation and service for constituency groups and state party organizations.

"He understands the necessity of a party that understands and represents the average American."

Democratic Senate and House leaders will join Carter and his advisers in Plains Friday to try for a consensus on the proposal, which will be submitted to Congress.

Humphrey Starts Unique New Job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hubert Humphrey has a new job — one never held by anyone else — as deputy president pro tem of the Senate.

The Minnesota Democrat will be a member of the senior team of Senate and House leaders who meet regularly with the president, and will get the same salary as the Senate majority leader — a raise of $7,400 over regular congressional pay of $44,600.

He also will receive a limousine with a driver and get three additional members for his staff plus an office suite in the Capitol.

The wording of the resolution approved by Democrats in caucus, creating the job to honor Humphrey after he withdrew from the race for majority leader, will grant the same position and benefits to any future member of the Senate who has been the nation's vice president or president during his political career.

Humphrey will rank behind Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., who is president pro tem by virtue of seniority.

ICE BOATING LIVES

A busy day on the ice

'You've Got to Love It, It Gets Cold Out There'

PORT EWEN—When local ice boating enthusiasts take to the Hudson River to sail during these wintry days, they are renewing participation in a sport that dates back to at least before the Civil War.

The first ice boats may have been brought here by Dutch settlers. The sport had participants along the Hudson River before the Civil War and it is believed that the first ice yacht club was founded in 1861 just across the river, the Poughkeepsie Ice Yacht Club.

The short sailing season must take advantage of frozen lakes and rivers. The season is a maximum of three months in the principal sailing centers of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Ice boats usually consist of a lightweight fuselage supported by a steel steering runner in front or behind. There are two runners outriggered on either side. The boats are capable of moving over the ice, under optimal conditions, at nearly four times the speed of the wind. A speed of 100 miles per hour is not uncommon and the official record is over 150 mph.

At the Hidden Harbor Yacht Club here, a typical weekend day will have 10 boats sailing on the ice. "When the ice is good, we'll sail every weekend until spring," said Warren Spinneweber, a local enthusiast. "You've got to love the sport—it gets cold out there!"

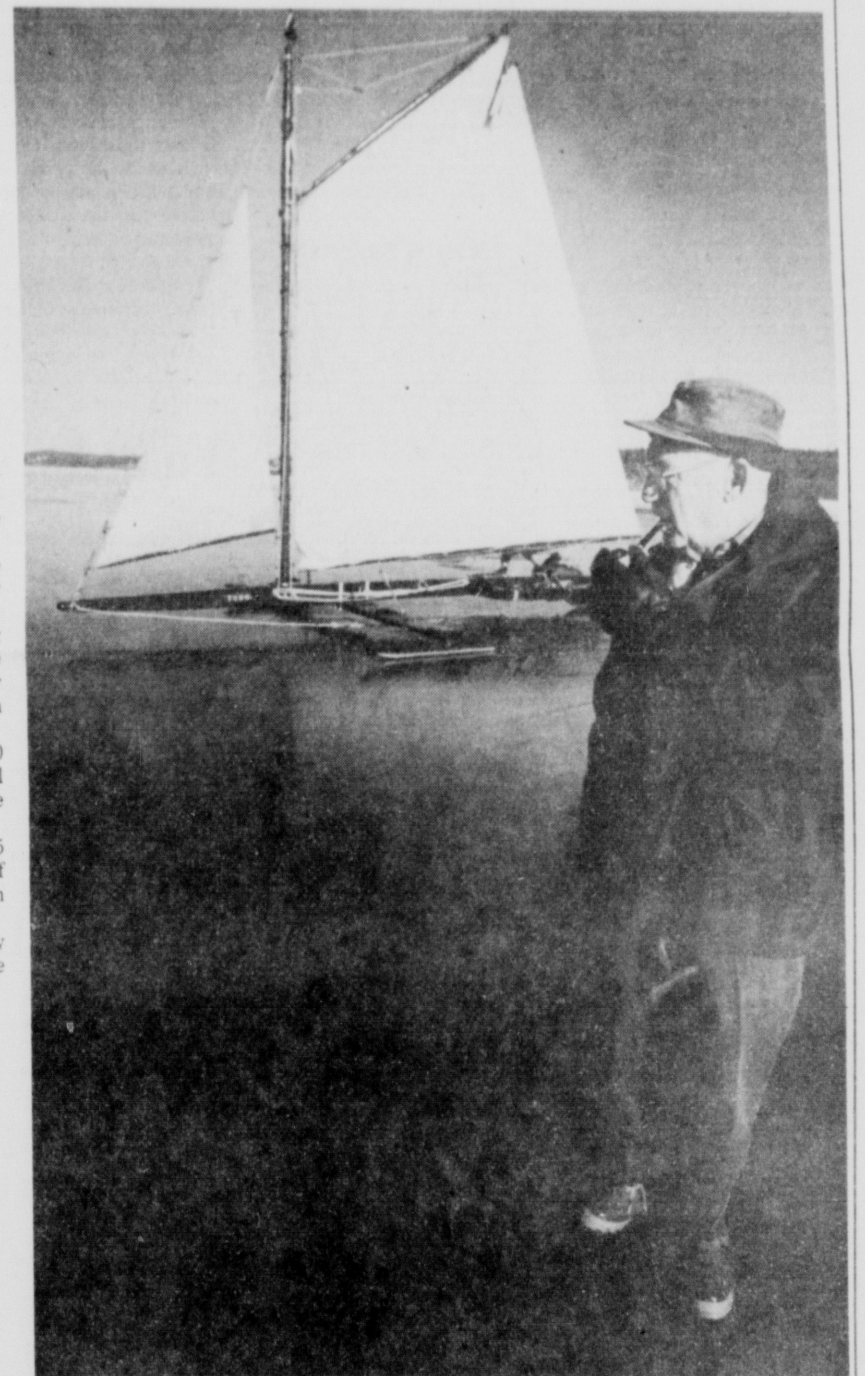

Spinneweber, who has been ice boating for 15 years and has raced "10 or 15 times", notes that the all-Eastern championship will be held the latter part of this month. "It usually draws about 150 boats and the site will depend upon where the ice is good."

Under the right conditions, the sport can be enjoyed from Maine to the Rocky Mountains. And if proper safety rules are followed, even children can drive the boats.

Houston Bench Rockets Rally Over Knicks

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Rockets coach Tom Nissalke was not kidding anyone when he called on his bench to finish an apparent lost cause against the rejuvenated New York Knicks Wednesday night.

"I was desperate," Nissalke said later. "We just weren't doing anything on offense and very little on defense."

In the final minute of the third quarter, the Knicks led by 18 points and the must have felt smug when Nissalke began to send in his subs, Dave Wohl, Kevin Kunnert, Eddie Ratliff, Dwight Jones and Mike Newlin.

None of those Rockets started the game, but each had a big hand in a fourth quarter blitz which helped the Rockets win a 108-107 thriller and jump back into a slim lead in the NBA Central Division.

Newlin, who came off the bench early to try to slow down Walt Frazier, scored seven points in the first two minutes of the final quarter to pull the Rockets to within five points of the Knicks.

Kunnert, the 7-foot center who was booed when he replaced Moses Malone, matched Newlin's 11 points in the final quarter while grabbing six rebounds.

Also in the final quarter, as the Rockets hit 13 of 17 field shots, Wohl ran Houston's offense and handed out six assists. Jones had two crucial blocks and eight points. And Ratliff bottled up Bob McAdoo by shoving him toward the baseline and behind the basket.

McAdoo, the sixth-leading scorer in the NBA, improved his average with 27 points. Rookie center Lonnie Shelton chipped in 20 for New York, Earl Monroe had 23 and Frazier 17.

But no one could stop the Rockets when they got hot.

"This is a tough loss," Monroe said. "Especially on the start of a road trip."

Monroe led the game once after he reentered a pinched nerve in his left shoulder. He returned to score several crucial baskets and keep the Knicks alive after they fell behind in the closing minutes.

The Rockets now are 15-3 at home and Nissalke explained why.

"The biggest difference when you play at home is that you have time to get ready for a game," he said. "No. 2, there is better coaching across the NBA. All the coaches in the league are good. It used to be there were six or seven weak ones against whom you knew you could win."

Spurs 137, Nuggets 133

A crowd of 11,237 in San Antonio stood and cheered for nearly five minutes Wednesday night when James Silas was introduced. He had not played in six weeks, but Silas did not disappoint the fans who hoped to see his magic again.

The fifth-year guard from little Stephen F. Austin College in Nacogdoches, Texas, scored 28 points in 28 minutes to lead the Spurs to a 137-133 victory over the Denver Nuggets. He sank 9 of 15 shots from the field, made 10 of 11 free throws, had three assists and one steal.

He also gave further credence to his nickname by scoring nine of his points in the fourth quarter, including five free throws in the last 2:20 to stop a Denver rally. They call him "The Late Mr. Silas" because, as he demonstrated against Denver, Silas is often at his most productive near the end of the game.

All that before a home crowd in Silas' first game since undergoing knee surgery six weeks ago.

"It really got me going knowing everyone was waiting for me," Silas said. "As I stood out there it really pepped me up."

Silas entered the game early in the first quarter when George Gervin, who scored a game-high 30 points, picked up his third foul.

"I didn't think I'd play as long as I did but when the fans yelled like they did I really forgot about my wind," Silas said. "I really owe it all to them (fans). The knee didn't bother me any."

Mark Olberding added a season-high 22 points to help the Spurs improve their record to 20-17, the first time they have been three games above .500 in the NBA.

Bobby Jones and David Thompson led Denver with 27 points each and Dan Issel scored 26.

The Nuggets, who still have the best record in the NBA at 24-12, played part of the game without Coach Larry Brown, who was ejected at 7:29 of the third period after receiving his second technical foul.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 117-94, Golden State defeated Buffalo 118-109, Washington downed the New York Nets 107-92, Detroit topped Phoenix 118-115, Indiana dumped Chicago 109-94, and Seattle edged Boston 94-93.

76ers 117, Lakers 94

Julius Erving had a game-high 26 points and George McGinnis 20 to lead Atlantic Division-leading Philadelphia. Lloyd Free scored 12 of his 19 points in the first period when the 76ers grabbed a 38-20 lead to put the game out of reach. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 28 points.

Warriors 118, Braves 109

Phil Smith scored a team-high 24 points, Jamaal Wilkes 23 and Robert Parrish 18 as Golden State rallied to beat Buffalo. The Braves, who led 85-66 with 5:24 left in third quarter, were led by Randy Smith with 33 points.

Bullets 107, Nets 92

Phil Chenier and Leonard Robinson each scored 28 points to send Washington to its fourth straight victory. Elvin Hayes added 21 for the Bullets who boosted their record to the .500 mark for the first time since Nov. 20.

Pistons 118, Suns 115

Chris Ford's basket with 56 seconds left climaxed a wild fourth period, sending Detroit to its 10th victory in its last 14 games. Howard Porter's jumper tied the game at 114 before Ford connected. Bob Lanier finished with 30 points and M.L. Carr had 23 to pace the Pistons. Alvan Adams topped the Suns with 24.

Pacers 109, Bulls 94

Billy Knight scored a season-high 39 points to spark Indiana. Chicago was led by Mickey Johnson with 22 points and Artis Gilmore with 18. Indiana's Don Buse, the NBA's assist leader, got 12 assists and 12 points.

SuperSonics 94, Celtics 93

Tom Burleson stole the ball with four seconds remaining and made a slam dunk to lift the Seattle SuperSonics to victory. Only seconds earlier, Burleson, a 7-2 center, had missed an inside shot and drawn an offensive foul to turn the ball over to Boston with 11 seconds remaining. Rookie Dennis Johnson led Seattle with 20 points. Charlie Scott had 26 points for Boston.

Flyers' Coach Won't Let Anything Slip Past

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fred Shero is a clever coach. If there is one-eight of an inch he can use to the Philadelphia Flyers' advantage he will find it, as the New York Rangers discovered Wednesday night.

New York goalie Gilles Gratton unwittingly used a stick one-eighth of an inch too high against the Flyers. Shero said he knew it all along. But he didn't inform referee John McCauley until a strategic moment and it helped the Flyers gain a 4-4 tie.

The Rangers had taken a 4-3 lead on Ron Greschner's goal at 11:23 of the third period. Less than two minutes later Philadelphia's Joe Watson received a penalty for holding Don Murdoch. That's when Shero asked for a measurement of the blade on Gratton's "Northland 0473" stick.

The blade was one-eighth of an inch higher than the 3 1/2-inch maximum permitted and Gratton received a two-minute penalty, which was served by Dan Newman. So rather than working against the National Hockey League's leading power play the Flyers faced the Rangers at even strength.

Then, at 15:33 of the period, Ross Lonsberry beat Gratton with a short shot from the right side to earn Philadelphia a tie.

"We knew it the entire game. Everybody could see it was illegal," Shero said of Gratton's stick. "If we were down by a goal with five minutes left I was going to call it. I had to do it when I did so we would be at even strength."

"I knew they were going to try something," Rangers' Coach John Ferguson said. "They pulled that in Los Angeles the other night. I had the trainers check everybody's stick before the game except the goaltenders. Fred's got pretty good eyes if he saw it from the bench. We'll get even, you can be sure of that."

Gratton called the maneuver "a cheap shot." All five of his sticks were the same model and he borrowed one from Doug Soetaert to finish the game.

"I didn't know my stick was too wide," Gratton said. "I didn't even know the rule. It bothered me a lot to get that penalty but I can't say it caused me to give up that goal."

Pat Hickey, whose second period goal evened the score 3-3, believed the call changed the game's momentum. "We were hot at the time and they were down," he said. "It turned into a five-minute affair. We just sat there and cooled off."

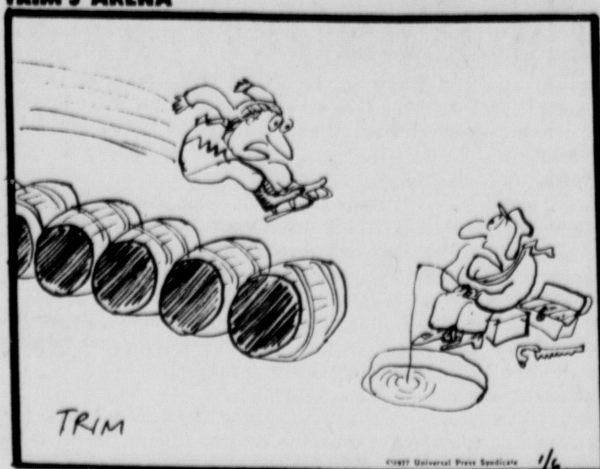

The Flyers' Jack McIlhargey opened the scoring at 10:22 of the first period, but New York's Bill Goldsworthy and Mike McEwen put the Rangers ahead 2-1.

Two goals in the second period by Don Saleski rallied Philadelphia to a brief 3-2 lead.

Thomas Tops Locals Named to State Grid Team

SYRACUSE — Wallkill High School's superb running back George Thomas, the leading scorer in New York State and Player of the Year on the Freeman's annual all-star football team, has been named first team small school all-state by the New York State Sports Writers Association.

Thomas leads a contingent of area gridders cited by the NYSSWA including Jeff Kaplan, Al Schmid and Phil Razy of Kingston, Nick Rama and John Nadratowski of Rondout, Kevin Hansut of Highland and Paul Shumanski of Pine Bush.

Thomas, a fourth team selection last year, was further honored by the NYSSWA by being named one of three co-Players of the Year. The others are Chris Crissy of Penn Yan and Dan Fafinski of Jamestown Southwestern.

The big Wallkill running back gained 1,638 yards in 238 carries for an average of 6.8 yards per clip. His 138 points topped New York and fell just short of the state record in that department and in rushing. He scored 23 touchdowns.

Thomas' figures capped a career in which he gained 3,486 yards in 575 yards. He led Wallkill to the Ulster County Athletic League championship in 1976.

Kaplan, a tackle, was named to the third team large school offense. End Schmid made it to the fourth team large school offense. Razy, a tackle, was named to the fourth team large school defense.

Rondout's Rama was a third team small school offense selection as a center. Nadratowski, a tackle, earned fourth team small school defensive laurels. Hansut, also a tackle, was named as a fourth team small school offenseman. Shumanski, a linebacker, took third team small school defensive honors.

Other Hudson Valley gridders named included Joe Lombino, tackle, Monroe-Woodbury, first team small school offense; tackle Steve Banach of Port Jervis, first team small school defense; tackle Howard Gritton of Pawling, second team small school offense; guard Mike McNellis of Monroe-Woodbury, second team small school offense; quarterback Dave Farace of Port Jervis, second team small school offense; running back Hal Sumter of Monroe-Woodbury, second team small school offense; end Chris Boyland of Washingtonville, second team small school defense; middle guard Tom Losey of Goshen, second team small school defense; tackle Paul Gardner of Port Jervis, second team small school defense; linebacker Rich Trybulski of Rossevelt, fourth team large school defense; and quarterback Robbie Petrillo of Newburgh, fifth team large school offense.

Selections were made after compilation of regional all-star teams from throughout the state.

Claims Course Was Crowded, Illegally Set

Tomson Protests Ski Opener

WOODRIDGE — Along with boilerplate and bare spots, the hazards of skiing in the Ulster County Athletic League just as frequently seem to include administrative snafus. That latter obstacle was still in place Wednesday when Onteora High opened its UCAL campaign against host New Paltz at Davos.

"The meet is under protest," stated OCS coach Joel Tomson of the teams' abbreviated competition. "I'm filing a protest for two reasons. First, because there were two other teams racing at the same time, and secondly because the course was set illegally."

Rondout and Fallsburgh were the other two teams who had planned on racing at Davos. The results was 80 skiers packed on the slope and not enough light left in the day to finish the boys' OCS-New Paltz match.

Tomson blamed the scheduling foulup on a lack of communication.

"I thought this year we had everything ironed out, but I guess not," he said.

Karen Modjeska and Barbara Sheehan ran 1-2 in the girls' race to lead OCS to a winning 229.35-255.80 advantage in that division. Modjeska clocked 37.12 seconds for the win. Heidi Leemets of New Paltz was third in 40.05.

Joe Hevesi of Onteora had a leading 35.02 time on the board before darkness halted the boys' action.

Injuries Hamper Kingston As Gymnastics Opens

KINGSTON — Injuries have hit Kingston High School's gymnastics team as it opens its 1977 season today at Arlington.

Coach Kathy Hatt's squad is minus floor exercise specialist Lynn Kemble, uneven bars hopeful Sue Osborn, bars and balance beam performer Cindy Rifenburg, and balance beam competitor Donna Ford, all out with a variety of ailments.

Karen McCullough (balance beam) and Barb Shaw (uneven bars) are the team's captains. Both placed in their events at last year's Dutchess County Scholastic League Coaches' Invitational Meet.

Other veterans on the team are Mary-Jo Murphy (balance beam, vaulting), and Suzanne Semilof (floor exercise). Newcomers include Judy Ford, Sue Hladik, Katherine McCullough and Stacy Smedes. Rounding out the team are Meg Allen, Wendy Kenneda, Carrie Waligurski, Elham Amini and Debbie Bailey.

Gone are all-county star Terri Van Etten and Joanne Schaller.

Petr Priordin scored the other goal for the Soviets. Wayne Connolly scored both Edmonton goals.

The Soviets got the only goal of the period although they were outplayed by Edmonton. The Oilers twice rapped shots off the goalpost. Connolly tied the score early in the second period, but the Soviets regained the lead on Priordin's power play tally.

Against Trapping of Animals

Dear Sports Editor:

I see where Mike Mauro, Fred Faerber, John and Jim Mowell are banding together to continue the "sport" of trapping. Well, if you want to fight this most horrible of all killing of animals — join the Fund for Animals, Room 11H, 930 Fifth Avenue, N.Y., N.Y. 10021.

The states of Massachusetts, Florida and counties in New Jersey have banned the use of painful trapping devices. Britain and 12 other countries have terminated the use of steel leghold traps completely.

We also are fighting the killing of coyotes, bobcats, fox and wolf.

As the killers of animals say, "there is no stronger persuader than a unified vote." Join the millions against trapping.

Rosendale Nordics to Host Ski Touring Series Stop

ROSENDALE — The Rosendale Nordic Ski Club will host the second of a ten-race series of ski touring races Sunday at 11 a.m. at Williams Lake.

The series, sponsored by the Travelers Insurance Company, began last weekend at upstate Tully. The races are designed for the entire family and are open to all ages and abilities. Participants may race against the clock or set their own pace on prepared trails.

Barry Strobel, 16, of Rosendale, placed second in his class and fifth overall in a 10 kilometer race at Tully. Two sisters, 16-year-old Kathy and 14-year-old Donna Wallace of Tilton finished one-two in their age group. Another sister, 11-year-old Tina, was first in her division. Teddy Peck, 9, of Rosendale, was third in his class. In the senior division, Walter Morse, Sr., took a first place in the 41-50 class.

This league offers boys and girls under 13 the opportunity to participate in cross country skiing and ski jumping. The program is administered by the Eastern Ski Association through the Travelers Insurance Company.

This Sunday's competition at Williams Lake figures to attract 150 entrants. Anyone may enter. Membership in the Eastern Ski Association is not necessary. Registration fee is $3 per person and entitles the skier to a chance at one of 45 medals plus lunch after the races. Further information may be obtained by contacting Williams Lake Hotel or Rosendale Nordic Ski Club president John Crews of Kingston.

Madden Isn't Fooled by Grant's Chatter

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bud Grant says the Minnesota Vikings defense is getting too old but his super bowl coaching rival, John Madden, thinks it's all a ploy to fool the Oakland Raiders.

As far as Madden is concerned, Jim Marshall, 39, Carl Eller, 34, and Alan Page 31, are as good as they've ever been.

"We're awfully old," Grant lamented Wednesday when asked why the Minnesota defense wasn't as dominating as it once was. "We just don't move around as quickly as we used to."

Informed of Grant's remarks, the Oakland Coach smiled and said, "that sounds like a psyche job to me. Hell, that's an old fashioned psyche job."

"Actually," added Grant, the straight-faced, put-on artist, "the real reason is that offensive linemen have gotten so much better. You don't have big, fat offensive linemen any more."

"It used to be that you put your quickest guys on defense. Now the offensive linemen are big, quick and agile. The big, fat, slow offensive linemen doesn't exist any more."

On the second day of preparations here for Super Bowl XI at the Rose Bowl on Sunday, the Vikings' Chuck Foreman hinted he was ready to sit out next season unless Minnesota renegotiated his contract.

"I won't play under this type of contract again," he emphasized. "I'm not happy about my contract or it wouldn't have come out."

"I don't know what's going to happen. I do know why they don't want to renegotiate it. Legally, I guess I am obligated to play for two more seasons. But I also know I'm not going to play another season unless I'm happy."

After holding out for 2 1/2 weeks before the season got under way, Foreman rushed for 1,155 yards and also caught 55 passes in his fourth pro year. He is completing the first season of a three-year contract.

"I had a guy representing me who misrepresented me," Foreman declared. "At the time I signed the contract, I was very naive. I've decided now that I'm underpaid."

"But this is something that I don't want to talk about any more this week. I'm here to play in the Super Bowl and I'm here to win. The team and my teammates come first and my contract comes second. I want to put that issue on the shelf. So let's cut it off, please."

Grant might have been kidding about his defensive line getting old but Page, a 10-year veteran, wasn't in pads Wednesday afternoon when the Vikings went through their practice session. Page has a hemorrhoid condition but is expected to play against the Raiders.

The Minnesota coach was asked about Page's charge that there's too much holding in pro football and that Oakland offensive lineman Gene Upshaw was a particularly guilty party.

"Well," Grant replied diplomatically, "Defensive linemen always holler about that while offensive linemen say they don't. I don't know if players today hold any more or less than they used to."

"I think the officials do a pretty good job."

We're not concerned about penalties. I don't think they are either." sBecause of the presence of Ken Stabler and Fran Tarkenton, Grant expects more than a few points to be scored Sunday.

"I think there'll be some scores," he said. "I don't think you'll see a 14-10 game. Not with these quarterbacks and the talent there is at the skilled positions. You'll definitely see more scoring."

Madden was asked about Stabler, the leading passer in the AFC this season, and Raiders' safetyman George Atkinson.

"The amazing thing about Ken," he replied, "other than the obvious things like his talent is his ability to absorb information and store it. You give him something and it comes out at the right time."

"Atkinson happens to be a very good football player. He plays his position extremely well. He is aggressive but not overly so. He plays hard and with intensity."

False, Deceptive, Unfair Schemes Eyed by FTC

Crackdown Urged on Home Study Schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Federal Trade Commission study today called for a crackdown on "false, deceptive, and unfair" schemes used to promote vocational and home study schools to which 2 million Americans pay more than $2.5 billion in tuition each year.

The report recommends such schools be forced to tell prospective students their dropout rates and their job and salary prospects if job-finding claims are made, give students time to study such disclosures, and establish a refund policy for students who quit.

"The evidence on the record indicates that the commission must act forcefully to proscribe unfair and deceptive acts and practices engaged in by proprietary vocational schools and to offer remedial relief to consumers in order to discourage such acts and practices in the future," the staff said.

It said such schools are estimated to be a $5 billion-a-year industry by 1985, but previous attempts to regulate them on a case-by-case basis have failed to clean up the business.

It recommended that disclosures on drop-out rates, salary prospects and the like be subject to a readability test — the first time that such a test would be required in an FTC trade regulation rule. The test recommended is that developed by Dr. Rudolph Flesch.

The consumer disclosures under the "Flesch Test" would be rated "very easy" to read and comprehend, the FTC staff said.

One recommended disclosure would read:

"Many of our students don't take this course to get a job. And we can't tell you your chance of getting a job when you finish. No one who works for us should talk to you about jobs or earnings."

Another, where a newly offered course is involved, would state:

"Our course is too new for us to know how often students who take this course finish or don't finish. So no one who works for us can answer this."

The agency originally proposed a rule governing vocational and home study schools in August, 1974. The proposal was republished in May, 1975, and today's report is the result of hearings held on the subject.

The latest recommendation, however, differs from the original in the "Flesch Test" provision as well as in a proposed exemption for schools which enroll 75 or fewer students each year.

The staff said while that approach would exclude 60 per cent of the approximately 8,000 schools from coverage, but cover 90 per cent of the students who attend such schools since most go to the larger schools.

Airbags to Cut Premiums

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The insurance industry has agreed to offer lower premiums for automobiles equipped with air bags, Transportation Secretary William Coleman Jr. reported.

Coleman told a news conference Wednesday that negotiations with the auto industry on a test project for air bags in cars are going "quite well" and a final announcement on the project is expected shortly.

Coleman has been meeting off and on for two weeks with industry representatives on his proposal for a two-year test project, beginning in September 1978, to place a half-million air bags in cars to test their injury prevention effectiveness, as well as consumer acceptance.

Coleman said the insurance industry agreed to offer lower premiums for air bag-equipped cars. Allstate Insurance Co., which has long backed the concept, already offered such reduced rates and some other insurance companies are now doing likewise.

Coleman said still unsettled is whether manufacturers can obtain liability insurance to protect themselves against claims from those injured if an air bag does not function properly in a crash.

Car Sales Have Key Effects

DETROIT (UPI) — Americans bought 10.1 million new cars in 1976 — the fourth highest in history and 17 per cent above disastrous 1975 levels.

But the full significance of the figures reported Wednesday on the best year since the Arab oil embargo in 1973 was the effect on the work force and on investment plans by U.S. and foreign automakers.

It enabled Detroit automakers to reduce layoffs from above 300,000 in early 1975 — 40 per cent of the blue collar force — to below 15,000 at the end of last year. Renewed interest in small cars could drop the figure even lower.

It also will lead to a record $6 billion expenditure on new plants in equipment this year as the industry attempts to write new records, topping 1973.

Volkswagen, once the No. 1 import and now fighting for third spot, is spending more than $300 million on an assembly plant in Westmoreland, Pa., to insure itself a spot in the American market.

The four domestic automakers sold 8,606,573 cars in 1976, nearly 22 per cent above the 7 million in 1975 and the highest level since pre-Arab oil embargo days in 1973. The foreign automakers watched their sales slip nearly 6 per cent to just under 1.5 million cars.

General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy used the occasion to repeat his prediction that sales in 1977 would be even better with domestic and foreign automakers selling 11.25 million cars.

With record truck sales included, total sales in 1977 could hit 14.75 million, topping 1973's record of 14.6 million, Murphy said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 7

Your birthday today: Events this coming year provide you with broader perspectives, inspire revision of your goals and program. Previous limitations are not so important. Once reorganized, your life takes on added intensity. Relationships are uneven, with moments of deeper feelings. Today's natives are known for temperament, expressing their strong beliefs. Those born this year are active, will make lively students, apt to be precocious, so that early education is helpful.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People act at cross-purposes, go nowhere. It's not your job to straighten them out. Travel suffers confusion, delays; check before you start.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]:

Reconsideration is the theme now. Discipline in managing finances attracts respect as you thread your way through current economic complexities.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Much attention goes into understanding others, what they try to say. Friends take liberties with your good will unless you put your foot down.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Make a clear distinction between your welfare and that of outsiders. Home life requires candid question-and-answer sessions and self-restraint.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Associates pursue business in their own fashion, won't see work or anything else in the terms you do. If possible, take time off for medical advice.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]:

Much depends on your ability to stay out of public view. Momentum of established work habits carries you through encounters with moody people.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Whatever you did right in the past is reinforced now by favorable comment. It's doubtful budget can remain intact despite the best laid plans.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Old friends away for awhile have developed in different directions. Dissension surfacing among associates calls for new equilibrium for future.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Resist urgent suggestions to close existing transactions or to plunge into relatively unfamiliar investments. Get a second opinion first.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: By coming directly to the point, you're in danger of overstating your case. Space things out, recheck information, let intuition take form.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Clash shapes up between demands of people close to you and your dreams. Be flexible, seek a compromise. Unusual sources generate tall tales.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Go it alone where circumstances make it feasible. Where it's not, keep your own counsel. Criticism is offered by those who don't understand.

TEEN FORUM

By JEAN ADAMS, Ph.D.

SILENCE: (Q.) Mark won't come near me anymore. He seems to avoid me all the time now, and I'm too much of a girl to call him.

It started one night when I was with my girl friend. Tommy, her boy friend, came along and asked her to go for a ride. Well, she wouldn't go unless I went, so I went.

The next day Mark stopped talking to me. I found out that three different girls told him that I was just using him until I could get Tommy for myself. It's a lie! I like Mark and want to keep him. Please help me. — Misunderstood in Pennsylvania

(A.) You say you are too much of a girl to call Mark. I say you are a foolish girl if you DON'T call him.

Every day that you let pass by in silence makes it easier for him to believe that what those silly girls told him is true.

Call him today and tell him what is really true.

WHY?: (Q.) Jack is 17 and I am 14. I like him a lot, but I'm not sure whether he likes me.

I've let him do some things that I've never let a guy do before. He acts like he likes me, but I'm not sure if he really likes me just likes me for what I let him do.

I've thought about asking him. What do you think I should do? — Not Sure in Oklahoma

(A.) You have made a mistake. You have tried to "buy" Jack by giving him a "bonus," something extra. You know now that this is wrong. Your conscience is telling you this, and you feel guilty.

Talk to Jack seriously. Tell him that have come to realize that whatever it is you and he are doing is the wrong thing to do. Tell him that you can't do it any more.

If he drops you, you will know that he liked you only because of the "bonus." If he stays with you, you will know that he really likes you.

If you want to work up a good sweat, take up golf or tennis. Since you can't get the same effect by slapping the cards down swiftly at the bridge table, you might just as well take enough time to think.

ride otherwise. This play can not lose and may gain.

AVOIDS LOSS

As the cards lie, declarer would avoid the loss of a spade trick. If East had started with Q-10-x-x of spades, the play would limit the trump loss to one trick instead of two.

South could not avoid the loss of a trump trick when he led out the ace and king. Even if one opponent held Q-x, the other would still get a trump trick with his 10-x-x of spades.

DAILY QUESTION

Search Ends for Tanker in North Atlantic

BOSTON (UPI) — The tanker Grand Zenith, carrying 38 Nationalist China crewmen and 8.2 million gallons of industrial fuel, apparently has vanished without a trace beneath the snarling North Atlantic that has claimed ships and men for centuries.

"There's one wild card in a thousand that says that ship is still afloat," Coast Guard Capt. Bernard Hoyland said Wednesday even before planes completed a sweep of nearly 150,000 square miles of ocean in a corridor 540 miles east of Cape Cod.

"The search for the tanker ended at nightfall today with negative results. We are changing our assumptions ... and assuming that we are looking for something much smaller, like rafts or lifeboats," Coast Guard Lt. Gary Cosciusko said when planes returned with no word of the 642-foot tanker.

Cosciusko said the planes were "going out at first light" today.

The captain of the 23-year-old tanker radioed seven days ago the Panamanian-registered ship had encountered rough seas south of Nova Scotia en route from England to Providence, R.I. The ship has not been heard from since.

"After the all-out search we've conducted, I'd say it's going to be a 10 per cent chance that she's still afloat, disabled and without electrical power and a 90 per cent chance that we're looking for people in rafts and lifeboats," said Hoyland, chief of search and rescue operations for the Coast Guard.

Water temperatures in the area hovered near 40 degrees, cold enough to render a man unconscious in 20 minutes. Wind gusted to 40 knots during the night and seas were running up to 15 feet. Water in the majority of the search area is more than 6,000 feet deep.

Other vessels mysteriously have disappeared in the same area: The Coast Guard said that within the last two years, the fishing vessels Zubenelgenubi and Patricia Marie and the research ship Gulf Stream have vanished.

"Everyone knows about the North Atlantic and its reputation," a Coast Guardsman said. "When you go to sea, you respect it."

Seven long-range aircraft from Canada and the United States flew from dawn to dusk for two days 1,000 feet above an ocean area the size of California, searching for the ship, debris or lifeboats. Radar scanned 50-mile swaths on each sweep.

Another tanker was lost to the Atlantic three weeks ago. The 640-foot Liberian-flag Argo Merchant broke up on Nantucket Shoals, dumping 7.6 million gallons of industrial oil into the ocean. Prevailing northwesterly winds drove the 270-mile oil slick seaward, but the Coast Guard said it could circle back and threaten Cape Hatteras.

"One of our chief concerns is what happens to the oil when it hits the Gulf Stream," Coast Guard Spokesman Doug

White said. "If it should get into the Gulf Stream, there's no way to know which way it will travel."

He said the spill might move toward Cape Hatteras, or slice through the Gulf Stream to menace the fishing grounds of Iceland.

Oil Spill Hits California

(By UPI)

In the past three weeks, oil tanker mishaps have stained or threatened North American waters from Panama to Nova Scotia, including one on Wednesday in California.

The 634-foot American registered Austin spilled 2,100 gallons of oil into Carquinez Strait while unloading at a Shell Oil Co. dock at Martinez, Calif., on Wednesday. The State Fish and Game Department reported about 200 birds were affected.

Here at a glance is a summary of the other incidents:

Dec. 15 — The Liberian-registered Argo Merchant ran aground 27 miles southeast of Nantucket Island where heavy seas pounded it to pieces, releasing 7.6 million gallons of oil to imperil rich fishing grounds.

Dec. 17 — The 810-foot Liberian-registered Sansinena blew up in Los Angeles harbor, killing nine persons and injuring 50.

Dec. 24 — The Oswego Peace spilled 2,000 gallons of oil into the Thames River near Groton, Conn.

Dec. 27 — The Liberian-registered Olympic Games ran aground in the Delaware River near Philadelphia, spilling 133,500 gallons of oil, fouling the shorelines of three states.

Dec. 29 — The Liberian-registered Daphne ran aground in Guayanilla Bay, Puerto Rico, but no oil was spilled.

Dec. 30 — The Panamanian-registered Grand Zenith, carrying 8.2 million gallons of oil and a crew of 38, vanished 50 miles south of Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, after radioing a report of heavy weather. No trace of the ship or its 38-member crew had been found by Thursday.

Jan. 4 — The Liberian-regis-

Bolt Hits Plane Over the Pacific

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A DC10 carrying 228 persons to Tahiti was struck by lightning over the Pacific Wednesday night, but the pilot dumped most of the jet's fuel into the ocean and landed the craft safely.

"There was no panic on the plane. Everybody was relatively calm, though we all did our private worrying about what was going to happen," recalled Wes Gallagher, former president of the Associated Press and a passenger on Air New Zealand Flight 561.

After the emergency landing at International Airport, he said, the passengers applauded Capt. Tom Collins.

"The landing was better than usual," he added.

There were no reports of injuries. The 213 passengers and 15 crew members were taken to a nearby hotel for the night and scheduled on another flight today.

Carter Backs Curtis For Dem's Leader

PLAINS, Ga.(UPI) — In telegrams to all members of the Democratic National Committee, President-elect Jimmy Carter today recommended former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis as chairman. Carter's endorsement makes the choice almost inevitable. In recommending Curtis, Carter said "I know he shares my strong belief that the Democratic party must belong to the people and not just the political figures."

Rightist Militia Patrol Bierut

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Rightist militiamen blocked streets leading from Beirut's Moslem sector and searched cars at gunpoint for weapons today after a series of terrorist attacks in the city's Christian quarter, residents of the district said. News of the rightist crackdown was relayed by phone to UPI offices in Nicosia, despite the imposition of strict censorship on all incoming and outgoing dispatches by Arab security forces in Bierut.

Gilmore Cold to Visiting Lawyers

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Gary Gilmore turned a cold shoulder on attorneys who wanted to question him about one of his admitted murder victims, in a case for which he has not yet been tried, refusing to leave his Death Row cell to see them. "He never even left his cell," a Utah State Prison source said. "They didn't even lay eyes on him." The attorneys represent the widow and child of one of Gilmore's victims, Max Jensen, and two insurance companies that paid benefits to the family. Armed with a court order allowing them access to the prison, they tried Wednesday to take depositions concerning the July 19 killing of Jensen during a robbery on an Orem, Utah, service station.

Cancer Deaths Linked to Location

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Cancer Institute released a report Wednesday on cancer death rates among blacks, American Indians, Chinese and Japanese in the United States, as a followup to a 1975 study of geographic patterns of cancer among whites. The report said more men than women and more nonwhites than whites die of cancer, but striking geographic similarities in overall cancer death rates indicate a relationship between environmental factors and the disease.

Hotel Union Chief Orders Big Benefits

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The national president of the striking hotel employees union took charge of negotiations with the hotel association Wednesday, ordered $200,000 in benefits for the strikers and warned that the walkout may spread. Edward Hanley flew from Cincinnati Wednesday to take over the talks with hotel owners just as inside reports began circulating that the union was weakening on its demands. "I took over the negotiations," Hanley said. "I stepped in. The local union usually has autonomy, but when things are at a standstill, I come in."

Albany Alive with Laughter, Orchids and Men's Cologne

Maurice Hinchey

By CHAZY DOWALIBY

ALBANY — There was mirth and madness and gallons of men's cologne at the opening session of the state legislature Wednesday. New assemblymen meekly took their back row seats in the wood-carved, stained-glass chamber as TV crews adjusted lights and camera angles for a live broadcast of the governor's annual message.

Little girls in smock dresses and pigtails were everywhere. They came with their daddies, the well-barbered fleet of young politicians, to witness the centuries-old ceremony.

Women wore orchid corsages and patent leather shoes and elbowed their way to the folding wooden chairs that packed the great hall.

Nobody could get an elevator and hundreds of puffing legislators and guests plowed their way up and down the marble stairs of the $2 billion Empire State Plaza.

On the floor the survivors of last November's popularity poll congratulated each other on securing another two years of employment in these hard times and compared margin-of-victory votes.

101st District Democrat Maurice Hinchey said his share of hellos and State Senator Richard Schermerhorn managed to make an entrance just behind the Senate leadership when the to houses gathered to listen to Gov. Hugh Carey's new year plans.

The governor got his standard standing ovation from the heavily Democratic audience, but his half-hour speech drew only three spontaneous outbursts — the loudest thunder of approval for a promise: that there would be no new taxes on state citizens this year.

There were also some well-known faces in the crowd, including a number of Carey's cabinet members, most of whom sat passively through the annual call to arms.

Welfare Commissioner Phillip Toia grimaced almost imperceptibly as the governor glossed over possible welfare

BEECHEL HEARING

James Beechel, 25, charged with hindering prosecution and harboring a fugitive during the recent $1.7 million heroin drug bust in the Saugerties-Kingston area, is shown arriving in Ulster Justice Court Tuesday where his demand for a preliminary hearing was granted by Justice John Gotelli. By Popular Demand: Lenny's To Stay Open

By ROB BORSELLINO

KINGSTON—Lenny Price, a man whose business card identifies him as an auctioneer, PR consultant, political consultant, judo instructor, social worker, cartoonist, wrestler, comedian, lecturer, author, weightlifter, art teacher, exercise instructor and advertising consultant, has changed his mind about closing his small store on Broadway.

The reason he's decided not to shut up shop and leave town, he says, is an ad he placed in the Daily Freeman several weeks ago which read: Due to popular demand, Lenny's is closing its doors. We tried to get you what you needed for LESS, but Kingstonsians seem to enjoy paying MORE.....so God bless you and GOOD BYE.

"Since the ad came out business has been great. People have been coming in and other businessmen have been calling and saying they wish they had thought of it first," said Price.

He claims it was not a publicity stunt. "It was a couple of weeks before Christmas and I was dying here. Nothing, day after day and I was bitter and I wrote the ad."

His shop, which opened with hardware and children's clothing last March, now does a brisk business selling used clothing, rings, pipes, papers and other "head shop" paraphernalia. Within the span of an hour recently, he sold one woolen vest, at $2.14, three eight-track tapes, at 50

By SID LEAVITT
Freeman staff

KINGSTON — Federal officials have ruled out the possibility that community development funds could be used to spur commercial construction in the downtown Broadway East area, Mayor Francis R. Koenig said today.

Koenig, who said he was "sort of set back" by the federal decision, still was optimistic that a long-planned shopping center could be gotten underway this year along with a downtown arterial highway that is scheduled to go into construction within weeks.

However, according to Warren Butler of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the city can't use federal community development money to stimulate commercial construction.

Koenig's plan to do so, outlined in his annual message to the Kingston Common Council Saturday, had been overruled by Sect. 105 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, which doesn't list commercial construction as an eligible activity.

"Unless a facility is specifically authorized in that section, it may not be assisted," said Butler, who is HUD's acting secretary of community development and planning in Washington.

Kingston currently is in the middle of a five-year community development program which is estimated to bring a total $6 million in CD entitlement funds into the city.

Woodstock Estates Hearing Tumultuous

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

WOODSTOCK — A cryptically worded "Keep the CRAP out of the CREEK" placard at the front door set the tone of the Department of Conservation hearing on a permit for Woodstock Estates that would allow a discharge of 30,000 gallons of treated sewage daily into Tannery Brook. Massive opposition was mounted against the proposal, but many who participated in the highly vocal session left believing the exercise had been futile.

Near the end of almost 8 hours of strongly worded statements, sworn testimony, and cross-examination, DEC engineer John Kwak disillusioned many when he said he thought the hearing had been "a waste of time, especially with the opposition I've seen."

Arguments often veered off into personal attacks against Estates owners and government officials, and into philosophic dissertations on global environmental concerns. Hearing officer Francis W. Serbent was moved, time and again, to remind opponents to return to the specific subject of the SPDES permit.

Some 35 speakers had their say, many of them rising to argue several times over. The heaviest rounds of applause in the marathon session went to housewife Susan Bair and Councilwoman Jane VanDeBogart. Said Mrs. Bair, "A child of two knows all that sewage shouldn't be put in the stream. Maybe Mr. Bell (former Assemblyman H. Clark Bell, now an Estates owner) needs a condominium, but maybe he could learn to do without it."

Promised Mrs. Bair, "If this goes through, everybody responsible is going to be dunked in the stream and have their heads held there until they are baptized with all that s---."

Mrs. Van DeBogart argued the permit would be for "the specific benefit of a few individuals at the expense of the majority, and the town's right to plan for orderly growth." It would remove from the townspeople, the town board, and their Planning Board and Conservation Commission, she said, the right to "mutually cooperate in determining future growth." Argued the councilwoman, "There is no explained need and no pressing need

PLATTEKILL — While lawyers for the town and Dutchess Sanitation battle in court again, the state police and sheriff's department are weighing the company's garbage trucks in hope of catching the Poughkeepsie-based company breaking the law.

The law enforcement agencies agreed to test the tonnage of Dutchess trucks hauling refuse into the Plattekill landfill after a meeting last week between local and county officials, the district attorney and concerned citizens who claimed the company was bringing in garbage from as far away as the Bronx.

Dist. Atty. Francis Vogt said this week that the police will be spot checking to see if Dutchess is violating a county law prohibiting the importation of more than 80 tons of non-organic material into the county each week.

The garbage war started almost a year ago when Dutchess began hauling refuse from across the river into its 74-acre landfill in Plattekill.

The town objected, asked Vogt for help until it could hire its own lawyer, and won a temporary injunction against the company.

Dutchess then was granted a change in the wording of the court order to allow them to cart non-organic or demolition material to the site.

Town attorney Michael Forrester then appealed to the Supreme Court upholding the local law prohibiting any imported dumping, without a trial.

Justice William Murray not only refused Plattekill's request but came out with a decision stating that "regional needs of an area dictate the necessity for landfill needs and trans-shipment and town needs or local law."

Forrester and Dutchess attorney Harold

Mangold today present their arguments to the five judges of the Supreme Court Appellate Division in Albany, to which Plattekill appealed Murray's decision.

According to Vogt, who has stepped out of these legal proceedings, the case could have a staggering effect on the region.

"Basically what Judge Murray's decision says is that wherever a need exists, companies can come in from anywhere and dump garbage."

The district attorney adds that the landfill problem in New York State is acute, which accounts for Dutchess bringing refuse up from the Bronx to dispose of in the Plattekill site.

"If the judges uphold the lower court decision it could literally bury Plattekill in garbage," said Vogt.

Rash of Arsons Brings Shivers

By LYNN MULVANEY

BLOOMINGTON — They've got the shivers in Bloomington. Not from the cold, but from the alarming number of deliberately set early morning fires which have been destroying unoccupied houses one by one.

People are scared alright, said Postmaster Frederick Hofbauer. He has a sign posted in the lobby of the Bloomington Post Office alerting area residents to a meeting to be held tonight at 7 at the Bloomington Fire House. It is intended to inform residents concerning what police and fire officials have been doing to get to the bottom of the problem and to decide a future course of action.

If the first fire set doesn't total a building, it is torched again, another day. Residents in the Bloomington-Creek Locks area readily admit to being "scared stiff."

They wonder what is going to happen

when the arsonist or arsonists run out of vacant houses to set ablaze. They wonder whose house will be next? Will it be occupied?

Eighty-four-year-old Mrs. Neal Hot-

aling who has lived in her on Main Street in Bloomington for more than 50 years is "very scared," ever since the house across the street went up in flames. Five houses

Mother Flees from Burning Home

A mother and her four-year-old son escaped their burning home on Elting Road in Rosendale Wednesday morning after a fire reportedly erupted about 10:30, damaging the entire top floor and roof and inflicting water damage to the remainder of the frame building.

Mrs. Raymond Cole discovered the fire in a bedroom, called the fire department and ran from the building with her son Kevin. Another son, Anthony, 6, was in school.

It took close to 45 minutes to bring the blaze under control, according to Fire-Police Chief Warren Mc Kane.

Rosendale, Binnewater, Bloomington and Tillson Fire Companies responded to the alarm. Ray Ritter was the officer in charge.

The house, located at 71 Elting Road, is owned by Mrs. Cole's father, Rosendale funeral director George Moylan, who arrived on the scene.

Household items, clothing and toys are being sought for the Cole family, who lost all their belongings in the fire.

The Coles are staying temporarily with the Moylans until they can reestablish a home.

Buddy Had a Yen for N.Y.

Last fall Elden Hopperstad and his dog Buddy moved from Vermont to the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie. While it may be hard to believe, seven-year-old Buddy went for a walk last October and is believed to have walked all the way to New York State where a member of the Putnam County Humane Society used dog tag information to locate his owner. The two were reunited at the Dallas-Ft. Worth Airport.

Good Eating, They Say

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Ants, grasshoppers and other insects are nutritious and also taste good, says the National University's Biology Institute.

Dr. Julieta Elorduy de Conconi, an institute researcher, said the grasshopper has up to 75 per cent protein per gram; black ants (hormiga chicanona) up to 58.3 per cent per gram; and waterbugs up to 68.7 per cent per gram.

Among the most commonly eaten in Mexico, the researcher said, are grasshoppers which at adulthood measure about 1.2 inches.

Up and Down Overtime

NEW YORK (UPI)—After hearing a talk from their new boss about being expected to work long hours, 17 members of Queens District Attorney John Santucci's staff found themselves stuck for an hour and a half in a courthouse elevator.

Santucci, who was appointed New Year's Day by Gov. Hugh Carey, stuck around to oversee Police and Fire Department rescue operations. He sent his family, who had come with him to meet his staff, to a restaurant for dinner.

Courthouse personnel had trouble for a while finding the right emergency key but rescue crews were able to position a working elevator next to the stalled one and the staff members escaped through emergency doors.

Santucci, who has criticized the condition of the courthouse, said, "I'll save my comments about the building's condition to another day. Right now I'm glad to see that everyone's okay."

As to the unexpected overtime, he added, "Those weren't the kind of long hours meant."

Eavesdropping Operator Invited to a Social

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI)—The New England Telephone Co. has denied charges its operators eavesdropped on phone conversations involving prominent Rhode Island politicians because they had "nothing better to do." The charges were made Wednesday in a lawsuit filed in Providence District Court by Norman J. Jacques, an unsuccessful Rhode Island congressional candidate in 1968 and 1976.

He is seeking $5,000 in punitive damages and wants the phone company to drop $1,200 in bills he owes from one campaign.

Jacques said he learned of the practice when he called actress Marlo Thomas, a personal friend, in 1973 and an operator broke in, saying: "You don't know me, but I know you."

Jacques said calls of several politicians also were monitored, including those of Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., former Gov. Frank Licht and former Providence Mayor Joseph A. Doorley.

"It could be they were just bored, that they had nothing better to do. But we could find out later if they were on somebody's payroll," Jacques said in explaining the suit.

A spokesman for New England Telephone said "privacy of communications is of paramount concern to the telephone company. Any employee who violates a customer's privacy is subject to severe discipline, up to and including dismissal.

Jacques said he invited the operator who broke into his conversation with Marlo Thomas to attend a social gathering at his cabin in Lincoln where he tape recorded comments she made about her job.

The tape, taken without the operator's knowledge, is prime evidence in the suit. Jacques said the woman, still employed by company, told of monitored conversations involving Pell, Licht and Doorley. The suit also included two affidavits from operators admitting the eavesdropping.

Weather and Us

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—A professor studying the effects of weather on human behavior says an approaching cold front causes people to be more likely to be involved in accidents.

This conclusion is part of a study being conducted by Dr. Earl Sargent, a professor at the University of Tulsa.

Some of his other findings:

— People are more likely to become ill just before a cold front moves through an area.

— Civil service test scores are higher in the spring and autumn and lower in the summer months.

— There are more crimes against people in the late summer months than at any other time of the year.

— Piecework by industrial workers reaches a peak in the autumn and spring.

Ousted Cadets to Get Second Chance

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Cadets expelled in the U.S. Military Academy's worst cheating scandal will get a second chance, and penalties other than expulsion may be meted out to future Honor Code violators.

However, Army Secretary Martin Hoffmann's announcement Wednesday that the ousted cadets may reapply was coupled with several statements about the administration of the academy and the Cadet Honor Code and left some wary about the future.

Some cadets have already applied for readmission and a few may return as early as this month or next, according to Lt. Col. Thomas Garigan and Jerry Forbus, school public information officers. All should be back by summer, they said.

Hoffmann's announcement kept in force a readmission plan he had offered before he convened a special commission to study the honor question. He said that body, headed by former astronaut and former West Pointer Frank Borman, agreed with his decision.

"It will be good for the school, the class, and them," said David Chadwick of Buffalo, a senior cadet who will graduate this spring, a year ahead of the expelled cadets who had been his classmates for more than two years.

Chadwick said that what worried him about the plan was Hoffmann's suggestion that the code's section making tolerating offenses as bad as cheating, lying or stealing might be changed. "That's what I'm worried about," he said.

Dennis Zambetti, a senior from Closter, N.J., called Hoffmann's action "a good decision."

Bary Bomier, of Grand Blanc, Mich., said he had been separated from the Academy once for academic problems and had come back later — as the cadets who cheated will have to do.

The cadets who were expelled should not, Bomier said, have to "pay that high a price for what's happened here." He said he was "personally very impressed" with Hoffmann's handling of the scandal and his feelings for cadets' situations.

One senior cadet who listened to Hoffman but who did not want to give his name said he was unhappy with the decision to readmit the cadets, adding that he didn't think all the cadets involved had been honest in their dealings with honor boards.

Hoffmann's announcement that Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry would be replaced "in the spring" was the second move involving a top West Point official. Brig. Gen. Walter F. Ulmer, the commandant, was transferred Jan. 1 and left the school Wednesday, only hours after Hoffman's announcement.

"We feel it's time for new management," Hoffmann said. "We feel the appropriate thing to do is bring in a new superintendent."

Meanwhile, Bomier seemed satisfied about the course of events that marred his senior year. "They'll still be my classmates," he said, "no matter when they graduate."

Wanted on 163 Counts of Criminal Sale

Fencing Suspect Surrenders

By LYNN MULVANEY
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — William Dumont, wanted for 163 counts of criminal sale and possession of hypodermic needles which were fenced last year at the phony police-operated Donny's Swap Shop in Kingston, turned himself in to city detectives shortly before nine this morning.

A warrant had been previously issued for the 36-year-old Dumont's arrest, but he was believed to be out of the state at the time. When detectives located him back in New York, he was given opportunity to give himself up.

Scheduled for arraignment in city court this morning, Dumont, who also goes by the name of William Colon, is charged with five counts of burglary in the second degree, four counts of possession, criminal possession of stolen property in the second degree, one count of criminal possession of stolen property in the first degree and two counts of criminal possession of stolen property in the third degree.

Detectives did not disclose where the burglaries took place.

Dumont gave no permanent address.

More than a dozen arrests have resulted since the city police and Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt's office and State Police, concluded a three-month undercover operation conducted last year with the use of a police-operated store front where stolen property was fenced.

About $45,000 worth of stolen property has been recovered and much of it reclaimed by owners. Unclaimed property was recently auctioned off to interested persons.

Business at Donny's Swap Shop was slow at first, but city burglars soon found out through word of mouth that the shop was paying higher prices than competitive fences and business picked up.

Undercover policeman Daniel Greaves was lauded for his adept handling of the store operation as an undercover agent.

The store took in stolen merchandise including everything from sophisticated electronic equipment, CB sets and stereos to jewelry and drug paraphernalia, including the 163 hypodermic needles, Dumont is alleged to have stolen

Free bus transportation is available for senior citizens wishing to take part in the Senior Citizen's Nutrition Program in Mt. Tremper, according to Karen Schounmaker of the Ulster County Community Action Committee, Inc., 285 Wall St., Kingston. Hot meals are served to anyone anyone over the age of 60, five days a week, she said. Further information concerning the bus route and schedule may be obtained by calling Richard Knight of Phoenicia between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Barringer Disputes $2,300 Claim

Olive Billed for Welfare Monies

OLIVE — Ulster County has billed the Town of Olive for $2,300 in welfare money, which it claimed was owed from 1975, but Supervisor Vincent Barringer has disputed the claim.

Barringer complained at Tuesday night's organizational meeting of the Olive Town Board, "We are paying somebody else's bill."

He insisted that at least one recipient listed "did not live in the town" at the time the county authorized the person's eligibility.

Last night's meeting, held in Shokan, drew an audience of 50 persons. Discussion, which proceeded the official meeting, centered around the recently passed local snowmobiling law. The board voted to table any action until the next meeting, so members can gauge the affects of the new law on local residents.

Barringer also announced the opening of town ice skating rinks at the Shokan and West Shokan parks. The rinks are located under the pavilions in the parks, and are open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. "The town bought liners," Barringer said, "and has been slowly building up the ice, so that four inches now exist." He also noted that snow fences around the rinks prevent blowing snow from building up on the skating surfaces.

The annual audit of town bills revealed an actual fund balance of $67,246. "We've established a capital fund for landfill purposes," Barringer said, "with part of this money, and the rest will be used towards this year's general fund." The landfill will open for expanded hours on a seven-day, eight-hour basis, he said.

Yearly reports were given of each of the town committees by the various councilmen at the session. Councilman Peter Tosi reported that an overall plan for the Shokan park has been completed and will be used for the development of the site. Councilman Robert Adst said another full-time constable was being hired to afford more protection to the town. His hours will be variable, but will be concentrated at high crime times. Appointed to the position was George Haas of Boiceville at an annual salary of $7,000.

Donald Beesmer reported that his recent complaints about the county highway department had met with some success. That department, he said, "has committed itself to making certain improvements in the town as the board had previously requested."

Robert Burgher of West Shokan noted some progress on the Traver Hollow Bridge. He said bids would be let by the end of January or early February to make the present bridge into a detour while a new bridge is being constructed. He was not, however, able to give a definite date for its reopening.

The board appointed Jack Molloy as a full-time assessor at a salary of $12,000 per year, and noted the assessor's office would be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, and from 7 to 9 p.m. each Thursday, as well as other times by appointment.

The salary of town highway workers was set as previously agreed in the contract negotiated last year. Workers will receive a wage increase of 22 cents per hour. The salary of part-time constables was set at $3.50 per hour.

The supervisor noted that anti-recession money provided by the state was being used to increase constable protection in the town.

Barringer also announced the town had saved approximately $2,000 by hiring attorneys on a fee basis instead of appointing one town counsel. This practice will continue for the coming year, he said.

Other appointments made by the board included a civil defense director, two deputy town clerks, a publicity clerk, and a registrar of vital statistics. Robert Burgher was reappointed to the planning board and Evelyn Lang to the recreation commission, with the terms of both to run for seven years.

The board will fill two additional vacancies on the planning board at its February meeting. That meeting is set for Feb. 1 at Veterans Hall, Shokan, and all interested persons are urged to attend.

Saugerties GOP Backs Catalinotto

SAUGERTIES — The Town of Saugerties Republican Committee has endorsed Michael E. Catalinotto for chairman of the Ulster County Republican Committee.

Paul Pavlovich, vice-chairman of the committee, said the vote to support Catalinotto by the 32-member group, was "overwhelming and enthusiastic." He noted the group's sentiment was that Catalinotto "has been a dynamic and energetic leader, who has demonstrated organizational ability and political leadership."

Those qualities, the committee felt, would "strengthen the County Republican Committee." Pavlovich also said that, in talking to committeemen throughout the county, he has been assured that Catalinotto, a Saugerties attorney, had "widespread support."

Pavlovich said he's confident Catalinotto will be elected by a comfortable margin over Kenneth Whispell, Town of Ulster resident, who has also announced for the post. A full committee vote on the new leadership of the county GOP, following the recent resignation of long-time chairman Albert Spada, will come at a meeting Friday night.

County Land Use Plan Outlined

KINGSTON — A land use plan for Ulster County is being prepared by Planning Director Herbert Hekler and his staff and will be available for a public hearing some time in April.

Hekler outlined major items in the plan at Wednesday night's Ulster County Planning Board meeting. Land use will be divided into five categories: urban, including major residential and industrial uses, with municipal water and sewers; suburban, including medium density residential subdivisions, neighborhood commercial areas with municipal water and sewers; rural, including individual residences and small settlements with individual wells and sewage systems, agricultural, including irreplaceable farming regions, orchards and bottomlands; and environmentally sensitive areas of steep slopes, wetlands, public lands and higher elevations.

The plan will have a major impact on planning where applications for federal funds are involved. In addition to providing the basis for review of projects which must comply with the plan to qualify for federal aid, the plan will serve as the board's guide in reviewing local plans, zoning ordinances, amendments and local board referrals and will be the basis for recommendations on county and state facilities, highway improvements, park acquisitions and other public projects.

County planning board denial of a local referral means that a local board, to override it, must have a majority plus one (four votes on a five-member board) instead of a simple majority.

Hekler noted that the Village of Saugerties had to accept sewage from Barclay Heights and the City of Kingston had to accept sewage from the Town of Esopus, as recommended by county planners, to qualify for federal aid for their treatment plant projects.

A definite date for the public hearing will be announced. Maps and summaries of the land use plan are available at the Ulster County Planning Board office in the County Office Building.

The board approved a special use permit that will permit Alfred Higley to add 60 feet to an existing meat processing plant in Boiceville. Planners recommended that one of three entrances to the plant from Rt. 28 be closed and that Higley consult with the Department of Transportation about problems caused by cars backing from the parking lot onto Rt. 28. A one-way entrance and exit system was recommended.

The application of Jennie Levenson to convert 48 summer bungalows on Samsonville Road off Rt. 209 into low-cost housing units was referred back to local authorities. She had applied under provisions of the Farm and Rural Development Act to convert the bungalows into insulated year-round homes.

The board did not rule on the feasibility of her request, saying only that it would be premature to give a ruling before she had received approval from the local planning board, zoning board of appeals and the Ulster County Department of Health.

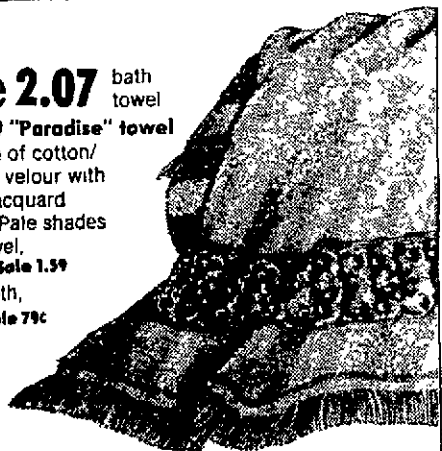

The board referred 14 other proposals back for local determination, saying they had no countywide impact.

Seven More Burglaries in City

KINGSTON — Burglaries are under investigation this week, including the loss of a safe with $4,300 worth of cash and jewelry from the residence of Michael Andrews, 37 Wall St., Wednesday night.

The safe's contents included old and new $2 bills, coins and a ring. Entry into the house is believed to have been between 10:30 and 11:50 p.m.

City detectives are also investigating the theft of tools from the construction site of the Rondout National Bank on the corner of Washington and Hurley Avenues. The theft was reported by C. B. Strain and Son, a contractor.

Twalskill Country Club was entered between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Ten cases of beer, three bottles of champagne and four sections of redwood fencing were reported missing.

A burglary at Lakeview Medical Laboratory Wednesday netted thieves cash and checks amounting to $1,444.50 and an entry in the law office building of S. James Matthews on John Street, by forcing a rear door, meant the loss of an AM-FM receiver.

Detectives are also investigating a reported burglary at Colony Liquor Distributors. It has not been determined at this time what was taken.

A burglary at Kenney's Corner, 169 Abiel St., Tuesday, was also reported. Taken at the time was money from vending machines, a calculator and assorted bottles of liquor.

Armed Robbery

Ellenville State Police are investigating the armed robbery Wednesday night of the BP service station on Route 52 in Ellenville in which $40 was taken and a safe in the building went untouched.

The 8 p.m. holdup occurred when two white males walked around the station from the rear and entered through the front door.

Holding a single barrelled shotgun at the station attendant, they relieved him of the $40 and tied him up with a clothesline they brought with them. The two suspects fled on foot.

Still bound by the line, the unnamed attendant hopped out of the station and flagged down a passing motorist who freed him.

Police are looking for a six-foot one man weighing between 150 and 160 pounds, age about 17 or 18, wearing a green and white ski mask, green army fatigue jacket with hood, grey and green sweat shirt and green wool gloves.

The second suspect is described as being about 5-foot six, weighing 140 to 150 pounds, wearing a similar mask, blue hooded sweat shirt, green fatigue jacket and black leather gloves.

which developed the 116-acre Broadway East area as its first major renewal project, for several years has had an agreement with Hurley Real Estate Corp., an ad hoc consortium of businessmen interested in putting a shopping center just south of the new city hall.

Although those plans lay fallow for several years, Koenig said he had hoped that this year's construction of the north-south arterial bridge and highway into Broadway East would spark the shopping center construction nearby.

His plan was to enter an agreement with the new Ulster County Industrial Development Agency so that community development funds would provide low-interest loans to build the shopping center at a net rental rate of $2 per square foot instead of the current $7 or $8.

HUD's decision against the plan "sort of sets you back a little bit, but it's not going to stop us from following through as much as we can to bring this shopping center about this year," Koenig said.

Several housing projects and new municipal buildings have been constructed in Broadway East, but the shopping center is the key project that hasn't materialized in the $12 million renewal program.

The general reaction to the Carey speech seemed to waver between lukewarm and cool among the throngs slowly streaming out of the two hour session.

It was as though no one had anything really good to say about the pep-talk, so they weren't commenting at all.

Hinchey, sniffling badly from a cold he picked up hiking through the woods with his sons last weekend, thought the most promising point Carey made was a promise not to "follow the paths of the past."

"That whole concept of reducing the size of government, phasing out departments that are no longer needed and focusing more on building up the private sector and less on constructing marble monuments is something that I personally favor," he said.

Estates engineer Mario Scavuzzo spent close to two hours on the stand explaining that the biodec treatment plant operation proposed was a modern, efficient, fail proof process that would provide all effluent limitations set by the DEC. Kwak seemed to support that contention when he said, "This is the strictest permit that I have ever had a chance to write or review."

But the plant was criticized by the audience as "a Rube Goldberg construction," and some questioners drew the admission from Kwak that small, packaged plants of the type "very often fail, have a bad record, and are more of a headache to the DEC than a big municipal plant."

Among the more vocal opponents were: "Alfred Robinson, poet-playwright, who said Woodstock was 'already an open sewer and the permit would violate what little is left of the integrity of our local environment.' He called the plant 'a high-handed attempt by a high-handed cabal.'"

"David Ballantine, author and gunsmith, who demeaned the Estates presentation as 'very clever airbrush work that looked like Disneyland.' He maintained there was not enough water flow in the brook 'to support gondolas and steamboats,' and said that in dry or drought periods, 'the town would live to regret the fact that there was nothing in the stream effluent.'"

"Joel Zaretsky of the Woodstock Artists Association board, who argued against 'something as atrocious as sewage dumped into a stream that passes right through the center of a town that prides itself so much on unspoiled beauty it bans neon signs and billboards.'"

GOP Ready for Change

Refreshing winds of change seem to be breezing through the Ulster County Republican Party as the GOP prepares to choose its new county chairman on Friday.

In the wake of November's election disasters, both the party "Old Guard" and dissatisfied "grass roots" factions are singing new themes. Saugerties attorney Michael Catalinotto, who has the backing of such established party powers as H. Clark Bell, and Kenneth Whispell, the county's super-intendant of buildings who believes he represents the "little people" among party workers, are both promising to make the party organization more open to young people and more responsive to the rank-and-file.

The GOP inner circle which for years has dominated Ulster County politics is, in a sense, pleading guilty to accusations that it has become too rigid, ingrown and smug.

But, as the traditional womb and rearing-place of the county's most prominent political leaders and public officials, the party elite still believes it is best equipped to lead the party through the promised reforms.

Backed by that elite, Catalinotto has promised if he is named chairman to consult the committeemen before making appointments and policy decisions. He has promised to actively recruit young people to the party, to aim at the intellects of county voters instead of their emotions, and to be more open with the press.

Obviously these pledges are carefully tailored to counter Whispell's broad-based appeal within party ranks.

Many party regulars give Catalinotto high marks for brains and energy and see him as the kind of man the GOP needs to recharge its faltering strength and influence. But the yearning for change may run too deep within the county organization for Catalinotto to overcome.

"Throw the bums out!" seems to be the prevailing sentiment among Whispell supporters who believe their man is more naturally inclined than Catalinotto and his backers to work openly, without personal ambition and without insulating himself within a clique.

On the other hand some Republicans feel that Whispell, as superintendent of county buildings, would find himself in an awkward position as party chairman. Though none question his honesty, they fear he would be open to charges of conflict of interest in his role as a large purchaser of building materials, labor and supplies from local contractors who might also be contributors to the GOP.

The first real test of the promises to let the rank and file wield more influence will come tomorrow night even before the new chairman is chosen. Whether the voting is open or by secret ballot, some committeemen feel, will show whether the party powers are still determined to keep the rank-and-file in line or now are willing to let them exercise their wishes without looking over their shoulders.

Whichever man wins, he'll have a big job to do. The pledges to open the GOP to wider participation and free debate will have to be made good if the party is to maintain its strength. If he can succeed, the new chairman will be doing a service to all Ulster County citizens.

Freeman Readers Write

Whispell Support Is Strong

Dear Editor:

This letter is to inform you and your readers of the Town of Ulster Republican Committee's position with respect to the vacancy in the office of Ulster County Republican Chairman, and to clarify several other items that appeared in the Jan. 4 Daily Freeman page one article on this subject.

The article, written by Chazy Dowdally of your staff, gives the impression that Mr. Kenneth Whispell has only limited support among the Town of Ulster Committeemen. This is not the case. The minutes of the Dec. 28, 1976 meeting of the Town of Ulster Republican Committee show that Mr. Whispell was unanimously endorsed for the office of Ulster County Republican Chairman by all 21 committeemen present. This endorsement followed a thorough, open discussion and review of the qualifications offered by the potential candidates who had contacted Mr. Joseph Lohmaier, our Town Chairman.

Later personal conversations I have had with several members of the County Committee, including committeemen from the Town of Saugerties and City of Kingston, indicted to me that support for Mr. Whispell's opposition is not at all solid in those areas, and that support for Mr. Whispell and his programs goes far beyond the towns of Ulster, Kingston, and a section of Wawarsing as stated in the article.

Incidentally, Article 3, Section 3 of the Rules and Regulations of the Ulster County Republican Committee specifies that should a vacancy occur in the office of Chairman, a new chairman must be elected at a meeting called within 30 days from the date such vacancy shall have occurred. Since Mr. Spada submitted his resignation on or about Dec. 21, 1976, and since a resignation so submitted must be effective as of the date of submission, not at some future date, the County Committee meeting to elect his replacement had to be scheduled on or before Jan. 20, 1977. The County Committee meeting scheduled for Jan. 7 conforms with these rules. I know of no attempt to "move up" the date of the meeting from some later date as implied in the article.

Boycott Coffee; Drink Tea!

Dear Editor:

The OPEC cartel is not the only group looting the American pocket-book. Now, we have the Organization of Coffee Exporting Countries (OCEC) which has raised the price of coffee beyond the reach of our coffee pots.

There is only one thing to do: paraphrase Marie Antoinette, "If they can't afford coffee, let them drink tea," or milk or martinis.

Now is the time for all good Americans to come to the aid of the party, the New Paltz Tea Party, which will shine in our history books with the Boston Tea Party, as another example of resistance to unjust taxation, which is what is happening with the price-fixed gouging by the OCEC cartel.

Coffee drinkers of New Paltz unite! You have nothing left if you don't.

An Incredible Appointment

The designated members of Mr. Carter's new Cabinet, and the key members of his staff, are being examined taxonomically — in the same way that one would read the ethnic profile of a political ticket. There has got to be a Catholic, a Jew, an Italian, a black woman: the list is of course potentially endless. The Kennedy's being something of a genius in American politics, it is now a necessity to appoint a "Kennedyite" to a special position, and the choice on the current roster is Theodore Sorenson. Mr. Sorenson is brilliantly qualified, having had close personal and professional ties with John Kennedy, for whom he also wrote speeches — including, paradoxically, the most bellicose passage of the famous inaugural address in which President Kennedy expressed a national itch to send the Marines anywhere in the world where the candle of freedom flickered.

Paradoxical because Mr. Sorenson is nowadays identified as the mother hen of the doves. He is widely identified with the movement to grant instant amnesty to those who broke ranks during the Vietnam war, and until there is evidence to the contrary one assumes that Mr. Sorenson is taking a moral rather than a pragmatic position. That, at any rate, is the reason why Senator Henry Jackson opposed the nomination of Mr. Sorenson as head of the Central Intelligence Agency: which appointment was, to quote Senator Taft on the choice of Mr. Durkin as Dwight Eisenhower's Secretary of Labor in 1952, "an incredible appointment."

The thing about Sorenson is that he is, above all, a moralist. Now that is not all bad. Indeed, at a certain level it can be thought to be all good. Moralists set the tone for society. And ultimate questions inquire of something only whether it is good or evil, all other questions being essentially clerical.

On a recent morning, at a newsstand in a Caribbean resort, two middle-aged Americans, clearly cosmopolitan by their appearance and accent, were looking over the smut counter, and the elder one said, "You're too moral to buy one of these." His companion said defensively: "I haven't had a moral thought since I was 16." Everyone in the area laughed. I didn't, and neither would Sorenson have laughed.

But Sorenson has been appointed to head up the CIA. And the CIA is not an organization brought together to ponder moral problems. When the late John L. Lewis was told that the Ethical Practices Committee of the AFL-CIO had spent three days in closed chambers, he sent over the message: "Have you discovered

The CIA is an organization which accepts presumptively the moral right of the United States to survive, and the derivative tactical necessity to maneuver in a world thoroughly uninhabited by moralists.

About a year ago, Mr. Sorenson addressed a distinguished gathering to give his views on the subject of the bribing of foreign officials by American corporation executives. While he acknowledged the complexity of the problem, his remedy was categorical. He would favor legislation making it a crime under American law for an American to bribe any official anywhere in the world, never mind the circumstances. Toward the end of the afternoon, one could close one's eyes and hear Cotton Mather speaking. Cotton Mather, given the century he lived in, was not all that bad; but he would never have done as head of a swinging intelligence agency.

all in comprehending the nature of the problem. He is probably even skilled in self-analysis. But, the temperamental strain of needing to overcome inclinations so marked could bring on an immobilizing organizational strain, or in any event render the CIA less than as useful as it ought to be. What characteristically then happens is that other organizations begin, out of necessity, to do work which is considered essential. The Army, the Navy, the State Department, the Bureau of Customs. . . .

Mr. Sorenson will be thoroughly interrogated. But he is not likely to have much difficulty. It is hard to put questions to him of a hypothetical kind that would highlight his problem. He is the best authority in the matter, and his acceptance of Mr. Carter's nomination suggests one of two things: a) that he believes he can overcome his inclination to moral judgement, or b) that he is pleased that he now had the authority to bring his moral affluents to bear on the CIA the better to neutralize it.

Cleaning up White-Collar Justice

WASHINGTON - The inside story of Watergate by John Dean, who went to jail for his role in it, is higher this week on the best-seller list than an account of those same events by the prosecutor who helped send him there, Leon Jaworski.

A number of reputable people, including some conservative columnists, are pressing President Ford to pardon the Watergate thugs still in prison with the argument they did less willful damage than the Vietnam draft dodgers, to whom President-elect Carter plans to give amnesty.

Ex-President Nixon, the only one of the Watergate crowd to currently possess a pardon, sits in San Clemente hinting darkly of returning to the public scene in some prestigious official capacity, as befitting his former title.

Meanwhile, a local district court judge has just imposed astonishingly stiff jail sentences upon two young people who embezzled from their employers, with the complaint that white-collar criminals have been getting off too easily in the past.

And U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger in his annual year-end report on the judiciary objected to the wide disparities in criminal sentences for similar crimes, an observation he confined to similarly situated defendants but which could easily have much broader application.

Obviously, the quality of justice meted out to criminal defendants is pretty much in the eye of the beholder. Too much judicial flexibility has led to arbitrary results, particularly in the treatment of those convicted of so-called white-collar crimes like fraud or political corruption, which do not involve violence.

On the one hand, it appears to serve no humane purpose to send a community leader of previously unsullied reputation, who is of no continuing danger to others, to an overcrowded prison hellhole. On the other, it doesn't seem fair for such a person to get lighter punishment because he is richer or more powerful than some poor bloke who could only employ the same greedy instincts by robbing others on the streets.

The most interesting development in this area is alternative sentencing, an effort to punish the white-collar criminal sufficiently to deter others, but at the same time gain some community good. Instead of prison, judges have imposed terms of charity or environmental work.

One of the most notable examples of such experimental sentencing occurred in a case involving price-fixing in the paper label industry. U.S. District Court Judge Charles Renfrow of San Francisco imposed stiff fines on the convicted executives and then required each of them to speak before at least 12 civic and business groups about their offenses and subsequent experience with the criminal justice system.

Recently, Judge Renfrow completed a study of the impact of his unique sentencing, and came to the conclusion he didn't know if he'd want to do it again.

The judge sent a questionnaire to all business, civic and educational groups which had heard one of the court-ordered presentations, plus a variety of legal experts knowledgeable in anti-trust. He felt it "significant" that many of those in the audiences had said they were prompted to make an extra effort in their own companies to comply with federal anti-trust laws.

But respondents found it difficult to accept the new concept, criticizing him both for being too lenient and too harsh. Not surprisingly, the businessmen and corporate counsels who responded liked the lighter sentence idea. Law professors and his fellow judges weren't very keen on it.

Renfrow decided that perhaps the greatest value in the experiment was in stimulating widespread discussion of the inequities and problems of criminal justice in white-collar areas like anti-trust. Which, of course, leaves us a bit more enlightened but no closer to a truly fair and even-handed system.

Nixon Bypassed Merit Plan

WASHINGTON — The last of the Watergate investigations, an exhaustive, year-long probe of Richard Nixon's efforts to circumvent the federal merit system, has just been completed.

According to the confidential findings, the Nixon White House set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of applicants for government jobs.

The applications were processed by a special White House Personnel Operation, which was established to tighten the Nixon grip on the federal bureaucracy. The politically favored applicants would be ranked, depending on how influential their backers were.

Then the White House would plant them in key career jobs which, under the law, were supposed to be awarded according to merit. The hiring was arranged through a network of centrally controlled "special referral units," which operated quietly inside various government agencies.

Even more shocking, top officials of the Civil Service Commission condoned and even participated in the political manipulations. They not only were aware of the illegal patronage system but used it themselves. Yet they are responsible for safeguarding the merit system.

These startling findings, perhaps the last echo of the Watergate years, are contained in a report by the House subcommittee on manpower and civil service. The painstaking study, which hasn't yet been released to the public, outlined how the Nixon administration tried to restore the discredited political spoils system, which was abolished 94 years ago.

According to the study, political favoritism in the civil service system reached a peak during the Nixon years, 1969 through 1973. Here's how it worked:

Patronage units were set up within each federal agency to find positions for individuals who were given a "preferred" status by the White House Personnel Operation.

The applications had to be forwarded to the Civil Service Commission, of course, for approval. But top CSC officials, instead of policing the illegal preferential hiring, aided and abetted it. Using their own "pink-tag" system to segregate the favored applications, they helped to expedite them.

The subcommittee report charges that Commissioner Ludwig J. Andolsek was personally responsible for expediting 100 to 300 special pink-tag cases. In one case, Chairman Robert Hampton intervened at the request of a former congressman for one of the ex-congressman's relatives.

As an example of how the patronage system operated, the study cites the General Services Administration, which hired more than 300 employees through the patronage system.

One GSA official gave an affidavit that he had been instructed by his superiors to hire a driver for former Attorney General John Mitchell during a hiring spree.

The official said he was also directed to hire the sons of two former Nixon cohorts, ex-Attorney General Richard Klindienst and ex-Budget Director George Shultz. For Shultz, testified the GSA aide, "we established a job we did not need and at a location of his choosing."

Yet six weeks earlier, the GSA had dropped a custodial laborer with nine children from the payroll, because there was no money to pay his salary.

Nixon's first GSA chief, Robert Kunzig, came out of the Pennsylvania Republican organization. He allegedly established a special "Pennsylvania Connection," through which Pennsylvanians received preferential treatment.

According to the report, Pennsylvania's powerful senators, Hugh Scott and Richard Schweiker, sent 91 and 130 job referrals, respectively, to GSA. One applicant recommended by Schweiker, Jack LeMay, played an active role in the patronage operation.

At the Health, Education and Welfare Dept., patronage placements were made by the Office of Special Projects. This was a special political office which was set up, according to a confidential memo, to serve "as a central point of contact on all politically sensitive matters which ought not be broached through regular Department channels."

The office was headed temporarily by a political commissar, named Sam Schulhof, who explained his function to Undersecretary Frank Carlucci in this confidential language: "Patronage, 'information,' 'advice,' 'political coordination' and 'quiet implementation' are key words which describe our mission."

The office checked the political philosophies of hundreds of job applicants and even contract applicants. This political skulduggery was kept so secret that the Office of Special Projects wasn't listed on HEW's official organizational chart.

The reason, according to the Schulhof memo, was "The sensitivity of its functions and, frankly, an unwillingness of anyone to really admit parental lineage."

Footnote: A CSC spokesman told our associate Larry Kratochewski that neither Chairman Hampton nor Commissioner Andolsek had ever "exerted pressure on anyone" to procure jobs for favored individuals, although Hampton acknowledged that referrals he before 1974 "might well have had the appearance of impropriety." A spokesman for Sen. Schweiker insisted it was "proper and legitimate" to help constituents find government jobs. We were unable to reach Scott for his comment.

Sexual Equality Is Sexual Absurdity

At the risk of being called a male chauvinist, and a pig to boot, I would express with reasonable certainty the personal belief that all the power and glory of the United States Government cannot make equals of women and men.

Equality is a noble concept. Equality of blacks and whites, poor and rich, women and men. The concept is fundamental to democratic government. As with all things, however, equality pushed to the point of absurdity surely will destroy the concept itself.

By definition, women and men are not the same, and for the government to try to make them so is more than absurd. It is obscene. There was a porno air about the Supreme Court the other day when the nine old men addressed the issue of whether women and men are equals, despite anatomical differences, because women are capable of becoming pregnant and men are capable of having circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies.

Politicians will promise anything, of course, and Congress in many laws has promised women equality with men in employment, education, voting and all else politicians can reach. The laws assume that men by nature discriminate against women, and it is government's duty to stop invidious sex discrimination.

Nature being what it is, men undoubtedly have discriminated against women and, government being what it is, Congress undoubtedly can make women the equals of men in the voting booth and other places where, as the bureaucrats say, sex is inoperative. Absurdity begins where sex begins. It is dumb for government to order integration of girls' and boys' gym classes. It is stupid for government to outlaw all-boy choirs. Boys and girls are different, and men and women are more different.

It is absurd and obscene for government to declare women and men equals because women become pregnant and men have circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies. But government has tried to push employment equality to that absurdity.

Congress decreed in the 1964 Civil Rights

Act that employers cannot discriminate on account of "race, color, religion, sex or national origin." In further refining sex discrimination, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission decreed that employers discriminate when they recognize pregnancy. And so the issue was joined: If employers provide disability insurance to men, does the law require disability insurance for pregnant women?

The Supreme Court pondered and decided. Six of the nine old men held that the denial of disability insurance for pregnancy is not discriminatory because women are different than men. Three felt that women are no different than men, inasmuch as women become pregnant whereas men have circumcisions, vasectomies and prostatectomies.

The absurdity is not in the decision, but in the fact that the issue came before the Supreme Court. Women's rights will march on, despite the decision. Congress can and probably will override the decision and proceed to still greater absurdities.

If I stand accused of being a male chauvinist pig, my defense is not that women are not the equals of men. I know some women who are more than the equals of men. My defense is that when equality is pushed to absurdity, the concept itself is endangered.

The concept of equality, in the Constitution and in law grew from discrimination against blacks. The civil rights amendments to the Constitution, ratified by Civil War, speak of discrimination "on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude," and speak not of sex.

The 1964 Civil Rights Act was directed primarily at racial discrimination.

Racial equality has come a long way and has a long way still to go. But the march toward racial equality has slowed as the drive for sexual equality has speeded. As absurdity overtakes sexual equality, the entire concept of equality is discredited, and if equality is fundamental to democratic government, democracy is discredited too.

Jail Diet Rights

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The county jail has been ordered to provide salt-and-sugar-free peanut butter for a man who claims his constitutional right to freedom of religion is violated by the jail's regular diet.

District Court Judge William Neighbors Wednesday ordered the jail to buy the special peanut butter and also provide shredded wheat cereal for Perry Eoveno, 25, at every meal. Neighbors said his order would be effective until the religious issues are settled at a later hearing.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed suit Tuesday on behalf of Eoveno, who is serving a two-year term for attempted burglary. The suit claimed Eoveno's religion, Spiritual Naturopathy, prevents him from eating the jail's diet and asked he be supplied with a special diet for the remainder of his sentence.

Battery-Run Cars?

Jimmy Carter is inheriting a country that has been living in a fool's paradise. It had its scare in 1973 when the Arabs cut off the oil supply, but when the crisis passed it renewed its romance with the big car at a price it seems willing to pay.

The result is a waste all around. Money that goes into high cost energy isn't available for beer and skittles. It goes to OPEC countries whose per capita income has suddenly jumped ahead of that of the U.S. (In Kuwait the figure per person is $11,510; in the U.S., it's $7,080.) But the OPEC nations' people aren't getting much out of their monetary riches, their rulers keep putting the new-found money into fighter planes and missiles, with new little balances of terror growing up under the umbrella of the big U.S.-Soviet balance of terror.

So the world, whether it's West or East, First, Second or Third, grows poorer all around. But not everything is hopeless. For one thing, there are the nibblers who persist in experimenting at the edge of things. They are finding new ways of squeezing oil from old fields. Every time you write about what one nibbler is doing, you hear of others.

The development of a long-term battery is one project of the nibblers. They've already made one for atomic submarines, but since it involves using silver in a silver-zinc combination it's too expensive for an automobile. Other experiments are being made with a lithium-metal sulfide coupling, a sodium-sulfur linkage, and a sodium-antimony trichloride mix. For use in an electric car these have disadvantages ranging from cost to the size of packaging. None of them seem as far along as a zinc-chloride battery on which the Occidental Oil Company and Gulf and Western Industries, teaming up as Energy Development Associates, have spent $12 million of their own money.

This zinc-chloride battery, using a safe form of chlorine, was put in a Vega some five years ago, and it ran the car 152 miles on a single proving ground test at a 50-mile clip. The trouble was that the battery with its chlorine hydrate took up an inordinate amount of space in the car. But now it is more compact and on its way to meeting the criterion set by Gulf and Western's Dr. Milton Hollander, who would refuse to buy an automobile that didn't have room for golf bags.

The first use of the zinc-chloride, long-life battery will probably be for so-called load leveling in public utilities. It will be tested at the Public Service Electric and Gas company in Hillsboro, New Jersey, within two years. The idea is to store up a reserve of electric current in the battery during the offpeak utility hours, and then to use it to meet surges in weekday demand. If all works out as is expected, the savings on power company operating costs - and fuel - will be enormous.

Since utilities are turning more and more to coal, their use of long-lived storage batteries for load leveling would not have much impact on the nation's oil bill. The really constructive use of the battery would be for transportation. By the time it will take to develop a totally designed electric car, there will be 32 million U.S. households with two or more cars. If a quarter of the multiple cars in use were battery powered, the savings in gasoline would exceed 17 million gallons a day. And the savings would be net, for the car batteries would be recharged in basements at night by electric power generated from coal, or possibly nuclear, fuels.

Electric batteries are already powering postal vans and other stop-and-go delivery trucks in American cities. But delivery van range is necessarily limited by the short-term batteries that are now in use. With a zinc-chlorine battery, a four-passenger commuter vehicle could go up to 200 miles on a single charge at an average 50-mile an hour speed

Taciturnity Pays Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, from all indications, will go down in history as an activist lame duck.

Already Ford's last 79 days are being compared to Franklin Roosevelt's first 100 days. And he still has a couple of weeks to go.

Since his defeat last November, Ford has proposed such far-reaching measures as gasoline price decontrol and statehood for Puerto Rico.

Some observers have expressed puzzlement over why he would bother making moves of this magnitude at such a late date. But I think I know the reason.

To me, it looks very much as if he is paying off campaign debts to the silent bandwagon. In case you aren't familiar with this type of political favor, I should explain that the silent bandwagon is composed of prominent or influential figures who support a certain candidate but who keep mum about it.

The muteness is the helpful part.

For were they to support him openly, it could cost him a lot of votes and possibly even the election.

the Black Panther Party and a defendant in the celebrated Chicago Seven trial.

Once Jimmy Carter's victory had been safely confirmed by the Electoral College, Seale called a news conference to reveal that he had been a covert supporter of the president-elect.

"I wanted him to win, so I kept quiet," he explained.

Now that Seale has broken the ice, many others who rode the silent bandwagon probably will be coming out of the closet.

The next step will be for political analysts to determine how much impact these sealed lip stalwarts had on the campaign.

It is too late for loyal tonguetwisters to lay claim to a Cabinet seat. But with many sub-Cabinet positions yet to be filled, they may yet have a voice in the transition process.

If Carter had silent bandwagon riders such as Seale, it is logical to assume there also were covert supporters in the Ford camp.

One might have been an oil executive whose company had admitted illegal contributions to the Nixon campaign or undertaken payments overseas. Another could have been a

Local woman named assistant district attorney

Nancy Ruseley

By MARGERY MOSSMAN
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON—Nancy T. Ruseley, president of the Ulster County Bar Association and newly appointed assistant district attorney, looks back on her beginnings as a lawyer and says, "I went to law school so I could get a job."

A surprising answer from someone who has been as hard-working and successful as Mrs. Ruseley has, but a fact nonetheless.

Mrs. Ruseley graduated from Skidmore College in 1965 with a degree in economics and no career in sight. In her own words, "I couldn't do anything. A liberal arts education prepares you for nothing."

Determined to make something of her life, Mrs. Ruseley entered Albany Law School and graduated in 1968. "Some people enter law school because they need a career and they find they can't stay—the work is too demanding," says Mrs. Ruseley, who enjoyed the challenge. Law school was only the beginning of a career that demands an extraordinary amount of dedication, constant work and long hours. "If you look in the windows of law offices on Green Street and uptown Kingston, you'll see one out of every two has lights on after 6 p.m.," says the perky, 33-year-old attorney citing an example of the extra work lawyers must do if they are to be successful. "People don't realize how difficult this kind of job is."

Mrs. Ruseley is particularly resentful of the bad reputation the public has attributed to lawyers since Watergate—and the two Ulster County judges on trial now haven't helped any. "This is a bad time for lawyers, but we are trying to maintain our image," explains Mrs. Ruseley with dignity. "There are extremely dedicated lawyers here in Ulster County, but bad press overshadows the good things we've done." Because law is such a confidential business, coverage of positive occurrences is difficult. "The Bar Association doesn't advertise itself, and people can't possibly know what individual attorneys are doing that's good."

Mrs. Ruseley also points out that people do a great deal of complaining about lawyers' fees without realizing how little of each fee is actually taken home by the attorney. "Some people think that all we do is rush into the courtroom, say a few words, leave again, and that's it."

She describes the reality of law practice in the words of Abraham Lincoln: "An attorney's time is his stock and trade."

Besides the "tremendous overhead" a lawyer must pay for the upkeep of his or her office, an attorney's work hours are almost endless. Mrs. Ruseley doesn't get home to her house in Krumville until almost 8 o'clock each night, and even then she's always "on call." People go to a lawyer because they have some kind of problem to be dealt with, and often clients under stress will call attorneys like Mrs. Ruseley just to talk, to relieve anxieties.

Mrs. Ruseley has never regretted her decision to become a lawyer. She has been in private practice for the past eight years—ever since she graduated law school. How does one acquire a private practice right out of school? "You hang up your shingle and go to work building up a reputation," explains the assistant D.A. with a simple shrug. But it wasn't easy.

Mrs. Ruseley made her first attorney's fees serving as an assigned counsel for the county. Her job was to defend indigents in criminal cases. After the first two and a half years of private practice, the young attorney was appointed town justice for the Town of Olive. She served from 1972 to 1975, and then retired after one term to form a partnership with her husband, Attorney Richard F. Ruseley Jr., at their present office on 111 Green St.

Mrs. Ruseley has always served in some capacity in the Ulster County Bar Association, and she claims that working her way up to president for 1977 wasn't too difficult.

Her appointment as assistant D.A. was a much greater surprise. One day she received a call from District Attorney Frank Vogt, who asked her if she would be interested in taking the job. Mrs. Ruseley answered, "Sure!" She is pleased to note that Vogt, a registered Republican, chose her, a registered Conservative; and she now warmly refers to Vogt as the first "non-partisan D.A."

Never regretted decision to become a lawyer

The new assistant D.A.'s position requires only part-time work, but Mrs. Ruseley admits that she'll have to cut down on her private practice for the first time in her career. The county job requires her appearance in city court every morning, five days a week.

Back in the office, Mrs. Ruseley is often asked how she fares in partnership with her husband in business and at home. "We get along excellently, which I am told is very unique," answers Mrs. Ruseley happily. "Actually, we don't see each other as much as you would think." Mr. and Mrs. Ruseley have their offices in separate rooms. They each have their own clients and do different kinds of work. "I have to make an appointment with my husband in order to discuss a case," explains the attorney, "and when we go out to lunch, we go with others. We're seldom alone."

"But we keep our business in the office and our personal lives at home. They are totally separate—and that's why it's worked so well. I guess it's because we have so much in common."

What are the hobbies of a busy female attorney? "Eating and sleeping." That's about all Mrs. Ruseley has time for. She appreciates any chance to relax, and finds cooking to be one of the most relaxing activities she does.

Life hasn't been simple for Mrs. Ruseley since her decision to go to law school, but she still finds it easy to say, "I'm glad I did it!"

DEAR ABBY

Treating a Tramp Like A Lady...and Vice Versa

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to you a few years back asking why a married man would pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who was really a lady) like a tramp. Please try to locate it because your answer was one of the best things I've ever read, and I desperately need it now.—SAME BOAT IN ALLEN-TOWN

DEAR SAME: A sharp-eyed secretary with a mind like a steel trap found it, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Why will a married man pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and

treat his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp?—MINNIE

DEAR MINNIE: A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a lady.

He treats his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp because he feels that by degrading her he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty, so to get even with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please check this question with your medical advisers? I can't face my doctor with it and it has me worried.

Is it possible for damage to be done to a child if conception occurred while the parents were on a sandy beach and a gram of sand entered the woman's vagina and was carried into her womb with the sperm?

This didn't take place in a public area. It happened in private, but I have been worried about it ever since. Thank you.—WORRIED IN HAWAII

DEAR WORRIED: My medical advisers told me to tell you not to worry. (P.S. If it's a boy, name him "Sandy." If a girl, "Sandra.")

DEAR ABBY: We have two sons, 17 and 29. They aren't "bad," but they don't have any respect for me or anything I say.

When reprimanded, they both talk back to me and do as they please.

I've begged my husband to help me make these boys mind, but he has never been any help at all. When I threaten to leave unless he disciplines our sons, he says if I do, he'll throw them out, bag and baggage. I need help before it's too late.—NEEDS SUPPORT

DEAR NEEDS: It will comfort you little to be told that your sons have tuned you out years ago and have obviously gotten away with it.

Your husband's cop-out is shameful. Tell the boys that if they don't shape up, you will not put up with their foolish behavior one day longer than the law allows.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

'Beginning Bard Abroad' Program

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON — A new one-semester program for freshmen to begin their college studies in Spain will be introduced next fall by Bard College.

The "Beginning Bard Abroad" program is intended to facilitate the early admission of seniors who have completed most of their high school requirements and to provide an alternative to the traditional classroom setting for the first college semester.

A limit of about 20 students will be admitted to the program as regular matriculated freshmen after rigorous academic and personal screening. Orientation will consist of an intensive two-week session on the Bard campus and a four-week introductory period in Spain. Tuition will be the same as for resident undergraduates.

Bard already has an early admission policy for qualified students but the new program, according to Dean of Academic Affairs Grace Allen, would be of particular benefit to gifted and talented students and will contribute to the better transition from secondary to college education.

The 16-credit program comprises seminars in politics, the arts, literature, and Spanish language instruction at introductory and intermediate levels. In addition, there will be possibilities for independent study to meet individual interests of students. The program will provide students with an introduction to the Bard liberal arts curriculum which features tutorials and independent study prominently.

The program was designed by Bard faculty members Dr. Mario Bick, professor of anthropology; Dr. Gladys Meyer, professor of sociology; and Dr. Justus Rosenberg, professor of romance languages and director of the "Beginning Bard Abroad" program.

Other locations, including Austria and Zaire, are expected to be included in an extended program in the future.

The Bard admissions office will begin accepting applications this month for the fall, 1977, semester in Spain.

Jane Pauley

Jane Pauley Is 'Today's' Woman

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — There she is — Jane Pauley — the all-American beauty from Indianapolis, "Today's" new woman, sitting ramrod-straight behind Barbara Walters' old desk, looking like a Vogue editorial for man-tailored suits, smiling an enigmatic, Mona Lisa smile, oozing self-confidence.

Pauley, 25, puffs a Kool with expertise until smoke smarts her eyes. Alas, she can't rub. Smudged eye makeup is totally inappropriate for television's newest morning star, rumored to be making $200,000 a year.

She claims the meteoric rise from relative anonymity to "Today" was not at her instigation. She says "they" called her, she didn't call "them." It has always been this way. She went from $13,500 a year on Indianapolis' WISH-TV to a $55,000 job at Chicago's WMAQ-TV. "It's safe to say I'm a fatalist," she says.

Now this — television's "au courant" Big Deal. Her attitude is definitely "que sera, sera." Says Jane, "Things have always worked out for me. Just when I began to consider my job drudgery and thought I was heading nowhere — something wonderful popped up. I've had precious little control over my life so far. Things have worked out despite me."

She winces at the suggestion that getting Barbara Walters' old job was a plum.

"NBC-TV did not play godmother to a would-be Cinderella," pouts Pauley. "I'm intelligent and competent. And I don't relish failure." She survived seven nerve-racking on-the-air "Today" tryouts, which ultimately landed her the job.

She is ambitious, but claims she didn't claw her way to this room at the top over such seasoned television journalists as Betty Furness, Betty Rollin and Cassie Mackin.

"I'm living proof that a woman doesn't have to grapple with barriers. At no time have I politicked for this job. I certainly haven't come to New York owing anyone any favors. In fact, I've never known a woman who had to compromise herself for a job."

Comparisons to Barbara Walters make supercool Pauley bristle. "Barbara Walters and I don't sound alike," she protests in diction that parallels her predecessor's. "And physical similarities are far-fetched and absurd."

Walters, she says crisply, had to be combative. "She came into the television industry when women weren't welcomed with open arms. But she didn't sell herself. She worked hard."

One of Pauley's first "Today" assignments was a recitation on "Winnie the Pooh," she hugged a stuffed bear and made a saccharine speech. The cutesy segment didn't faze her sense of professionalism.

"Barbara Walters didn't begin her 'Today' career by interviewing Henry Kissinger and Anwar Sadat. She did fluff interviews many times a week. But she is remembered for her occasional hard-hitting interviews."

Pauley, an Indiana University graduate, won't discuss her salary. "I've read it's six figures," she says. "It wouldn't be good taste to be more specific."

She pays the transportation costs of her "best friend," Bill Shaw, 28, an Indianapolis reporter she sees every weekend. "I can afford these expenses and he can't." What does this do to her man's ego and self-pride? "Bill's attitude is that it's better to have a rich girl friend than a poor one," she says.

Is marriage in her future? "We have no serious plans. In fact I don't know if this will remain an exclusive relationship. Oh, maybe we'll survive this separation." The scuttlebutt is that Shaw is dating a newswoman in Indianapolis.

She says she's looked hard at herself in the mirror and: "I think I'm nice looking. I look like a person who'd be nice to know. The glamour people associate with me comes with the lights and the make-up."

Her parents, Richard and Mary Pauley of Indianapolis, are not "overwhelmed" by her overnight success. "But," she says, smiling, "if they read anything in the media that is anti-Jane, they chalk it up to slipshod reporting."

Her older sister Ann, a nuclear engineer in Pittsburgh, is the real "star" in the Pauley family. "I've often blaned my insecurities on Ann ... She was always A-plus-plus. I made good grades. She was ... perfection ..."

She says her father, an executive with Dean Foods of Indianapolis, inculcated her desire for achievement. "I wasn't openly rewarded for A's," she says. "The idea was always to do better." Her father was and is the "constant" in her life. "When it came to punishment and mother left the paddling to father, it was, well, just about the worst thing that could happen. If I displeased my father, I felt I wasn't good enough to be on God's earth."

ERMA BOMBECK

Why Families Go Broke

We got a call the other day from our tax man, who said he was having problems with some of the figures on our return.

"It's your expenditures," he said. "They're way out of line. For example, you spent $15.36 on entertainment last year."

"That much?" I observed, peering over his shoulder.

"Taxes on purchases only ran $48.12."

"That sounds right," nodded my husband.

"Your bank shows they paid $3.16 interest on your savings. So, where did all the money go?"

My husband took a deep breath and said, "We're the sole support of a 16-year-old driver who is insured."

"Oh, I am sorry," said our accountant, removing his glasses. "I didn't know."

"It's all right. We don't tell a lot of people. It's awkward when they press money into your hand and offer to help."

"A church group even offered to send us a basket."

"How much coverage do you carry?" asked the accountant.

"Liability, uninsured motorist, medical payments, collision, $50 deductible, and comprehensive ..."

"Good Lord, man, why didn't you say something? Poverty is one thing, but comprehensive ..."

"At first, when we applied for the insurance, I didn't think it was going to be this bad. Then the agent said, 'Does your son make good grades?' The kid only passed one test all year. His eye examination. Then he said, 'Does he smoke? Is he kind to his mother? Does he belong to a book club? I thought two out of three wasn't bad, but he tacked on another fee.'"

"Does he live at home? That helps."

"Yes, but he drives a Z-28 Camaro."

"Don't say that!" said the tax man. "I've known presidents of corporations who can't afford the tab on a Z-28 Camaro."

"We tried to get him to marry just to lower the rates," I interrupted, "but there was only one girl he was interested in and he ran over her foot in the school parking lot."

"The premium on the tape deck was extra," said my husband sadly. "So was the CB radio."

"I'm going to give you the same advice I've given every other parent," said the accountant. "Get yourself an old, retired teenager who lives at home, has had driver's education, who is happily married, gets good grades, doesn't smoke, drives a station wagon, and hums. That'll be $50."

"Could we work something out?" asked my husband.

Senior Housing Applications Open

KINGSTON—Applications for the low-rent senior citizen apartments being constructed at the Gov. Clinton Hotel and the former St. Anne's property are now available, according to Alexander Yosman, executive director of the Kingston Housing Authority.

The two new developments are being built under the Federal Section 8 program and will provide 196 units, with senior citizens paying about 25 per cent of their income for rent. A senior citizen receiving $3,600 per year income would only pay about $75 per month, which includes heat and utilities. With the completion of the

soon as possible. Further information may be obtained by calling 338-4856.

Resource Course Is Slated by DEC

NEW PALTZ—The state environmental agency will offer a course for local residents and town officials on how to do a natural resource inventory.

Region 3 Department of Environmental Conservation Director Norman Van Valkenburgh has announced the program, which is aimed at persons involved or concerned about land-use planning.

According to Van Valkenburgh, the inventory is "equally a process and a product where by the resources within a particular village, town or county are identified, and recorded by using a data map with a series of overlays."

Components of the inventory can include soils, depth of bedrock, slope, water, open space and wetlands as well as cultural resources.

In addition to providing knowledge of "what is" within a certain area, the inventory provides information for determining "what can be"—what the land itself can sustain, said the director.

The course will be run on consecutive Tuesday nights beginning Jan. 11 to March 1, from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. at the DEC Regional Office in New Paltz.

The 1977 Natural Resource Inventory Course is the third such offering for Ulster County and was planned by representatives of a variety of local environmental and educational groups.

The NRI course will cost $15. Further information on registration may be obtained from the county Environmental Management Council or the DEC Region 3 office in New Paltz.

Goldwater Snubbed, Withdraws Support

Conservative-Moderate Battle over GOP National Chairman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A conservative-moderate battle over a new Republican National Chairman is on, with President Ford and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller backing Texas James Baker, Ford's presidential campaign manager.

Ford and Rockefeller met at the White House Wednesday with former Govs. Ronald Reagan of California and John Connally of Texas, both of whom said there was no agreement on who should succeed Mary Louise Smith when the Republican National Committee meets here Jan. 14-15.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, the party's 1964 presidential candidate, was so angered at not being invited to the party's "summit" council he declared he would never again raise funds for or otherwise help the GOP.

Several sources said the GOP meeting was held in a cordial atmosphere at which Ford strongly backed Baker. Rockefeller did not state a preference at the meeting, but his office later announced he would back whomever Ford wanted — without naming Baker.

Reagan reportedly told the other three that Baker was not acceptable, and his choice — and that of most sunbelt conservatives — was Utah State Chairman Richard Richards. Connally was mum. He was once mentioned for the chairmanship and boosted by a group of southern GOP leaders. When Connally withdrew, they switched to former Sen. William Brock of Tennessee, who is now a full time contender for the post.

Baker, a young Houston lawyer, was never involved in a major national campaign before he served as Ford's chief delegate hunter and later campaign chairman last year.

A high White House source said Ford phoned Mrs. Smith after the lunch and told her he would support whomever the committee picks but that his preference is Jim Baker.

"It's the President's personal preference," the source said.

Rockefeller's backing was seen as a signal to liberal Republicans in the Northeast. Richard Rosenbaum, the New York State chairman and chairman of the Republican state chairmen, said in Albany he "strongly supported" the Ford-Rockefeller choice, without naming Baker.

There were also indications that Sen. Robert Dole, the unsuccessful GOP vice presidential candidate, would back Baker.

The first sign of a split among the GOP big four came

when they refused to meet with reporters after the luncheon, as they had after a similar unity session last month.

Reagan did stop long enough to say there was no agreement.

"It's simply been left (that) any individual who wants to speak up can," Reagan said. "We believe it's the function of the national committee" to select a chairman.

Democratic Senate and House leaders will join Carter and his advisers in Plains Friday to try for a consensus on the proposal, which will be submitted to Congress.

Humphrey Starts Unique New Job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hubert Humphrey has a new job — one never held by anyone else — as deputy president pro tem of the Senate.

The Minnesota Democrat will be a member of the senior team of Senate and House leaders who meet regularly with the president, and will get the same salary as the Senate majority leader — a raise of $7,400 over regular congressional pay of $44,600.

He also will receive a limousine with a driver and get three additional members for his staff plus an office suite in the Capitol.

The wording of the resolution approved by Democrats in caucus, creating the job to honor Humphrey after he withdrew from the race for majority leader, will grant the same position and benefits to any future member of the Senate who has been the nation's vice president or president during his political career.

Humphrey will rank behind Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., who is president pro tem by virtue of seniority.

ICE BOATING LIVES

A busy day on the ice

The end of a full day of boating

Boats have been clocked at over 100 MPH

'You've Got to Love It, It Gets Cold Out There'

PORT EWEN—When local ice boating enthusiasts take to the Hudson River to sail during these wintry days, they are renewing participation in a sport that dates back to at least before the Civil War.

The first ice boats may have been brought here by Dutch settlers. The sport had participants along the Hudson River before the Civil War and it is believed that the first ice yacht club was founded in 1861 just across the river, the Poughkeepsie Ice Yacht Club.

The short sailing season must take advantage of frozen lakes and rivers. The season is a maximum of three months in the principal sailing centers of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Ice boats usually consist of a lightweight fuselage supported by a steel steering runner in front or behind. There are two runners outriggered on either side. The boats are capable of moving over the ice, under optimal conditions, at nearly four times the speed of the wind. A speed of 100 miles per hour is not uncommon and the official record is over 150 mph.

At the Hidden Harbor Yacht Club here, a typical weekend day will have 10 boats sailing on the ice. "When the ice is good, we'll sail every weekend until spring," said Warren Spinneweber, a local enthusiast. "You've got to love the sport—it gets cold out there!"

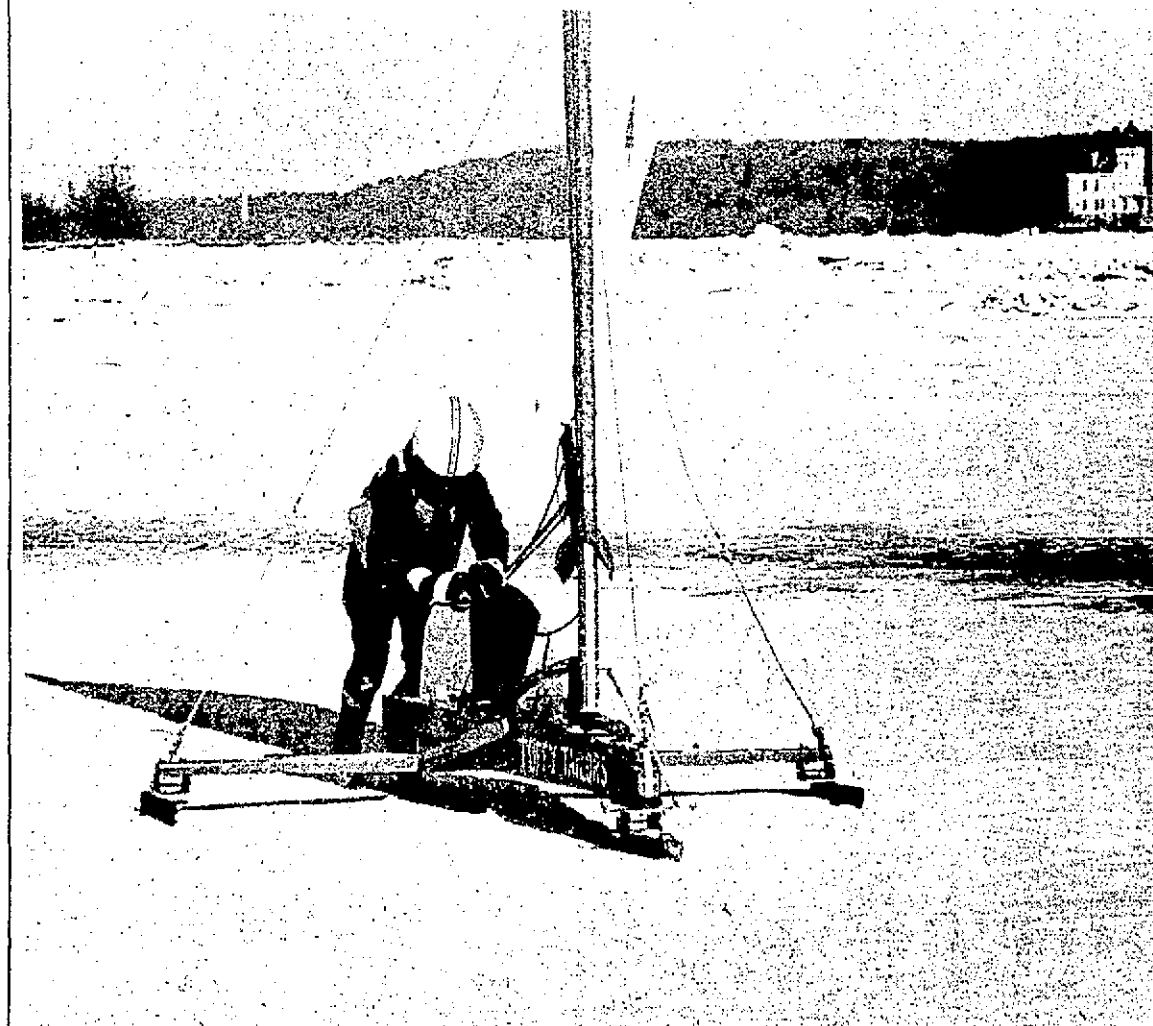

Spinneweber, who has been ice boating for 15 years and has raced "10 or 15 times", notes that the all-Eastern championship will be held the latter part of this month. "It usually draws about 150 boats and the site will depend upon where the ice is good."

Under the right conditions, the sport can be enjoyed from Maine to the Rocky Mountains. And if proper safety rules are followed, even children can drive the boats.

Veteran shortstop Bud Harrelson and first baseman-outfielder John Milner were among six players who returned signed contracts to the New York Mets for the 1977 season, the club announced Wednesday. Deciding not to deprive women athletes of the same benefits currently being given to men, the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Wednesday night rescinded an immediate restriction on athletic scholarships for women. According to a motion passed after a long and confusing session, financial aid based on athletic ability will be limited to tuition and fees effective August, 1978. Earlier in the day, delegates to the annual AIAW convention in a close vote moved to exclude room and board from financial aid for women athletes....

Phil Piton, former president of baseball's minor leagues, brought two names out of the past, Art Shires and Hack Wilson, in testimony on behalf of Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, defendant in a $3.5 million damage suit filed by Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley. Piton, who described himself as a "jack of all trades" in the office of baseball's first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, brought up Shires and Wilson Wednesday as evidence that Landis believed he could act in the best interests of baseball on any matter....

Sue Barker, after three days of answering questions about how she'll play Chris Evert, can finally talk about a real match, not hypothetical cases. "I'm not going to play negatively, that's for sure," she said Wednesday night after beating Ingrid Bentzer, 6-1, 6-4, to advance to the quarterfinals of the $100,000 Virginia Slims of Washington and a Friday night showdown with Evert....

Kevin Gannon averaged 233 per game Wednesday to grab the second-round lead of the $80,000 Classic, opening stop on the 16-week Professional Bowlers Association winter tour. Gannon rolled games of 204, 223, 238, 279, 226 and 225 in the first six-game block to trail leader Norm Meyers by 72 pins, but took the lead with second-block games of 258, 203, 246, 225, 258 and 212 for a 2,797 total....

Ron Turcotte capped a string of four straight winners Wednesday by guiding Shy Dawn from far off the pace to win the $25,000 Aqueduct feature by 1 1/4-lengths over Illiterate. Turcotte's streak started in the fifth race with Waza Buck ($10.00) and continued with victories in the sixth (Irish Era, $7.60) and seventh (Pres de Tu, $4.80) before guiding Shy Dawn to victory after trailing by more than 14 lengths at one point....

Thomas Kershner has resigned as chairman of the Union College Athletics Department, but will remain as chairman of the college Economics Department college provost Willard Enteman announced Wednesday. The expansion Toronto Blue Jays announced Wednesday they have assigned pitcher Larry Anderson to the Chicago White Sox to complete the deal in which they obtained their first player, catcher Phil Roof, who joined the team last October. Anderson, a 24-year-old righthander, spent the 1976 season with Spokane of the Pacific Coast League, and had pitched previously with the Milwaukee Brewers....

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bud Grant says the Minnesota Vikings defense is getting too old but his super bowl coaching rival, John Madden, thinks it's all a ploy to fool the Oakland Raiders. As far as Madden is concerned, Jim Marshall, 39, Carl Eller, 34, and Alan Page 31, are as good as they've ever been. "We're awfully old," Grant lamented Wednesday when asked why the Minnesota defense wasn't as dominating as it once was. "We just don't move around as quickly as we used to."

Informed of Grant's remarks, the Oakland Coach smiled and said, "that sounds like a psyche job to me. Hell, that's an old fashioned psyche job."

"Actually," added Grant, the straight-faced, put-on artist, "the real reason is that offensive linemen have gotten so much better. You don't have big, fat offensive linemen any more. "It used to be that you put your quickest guys on defense. Now the offensive linemen are big, quick and agile. The big, fat, slow offensive linemen doesn't exist any more."

On the second day of preparations here for Super Bowl XI at the Rose Bowl on Sunday, the Vikings' Chuck Foreman hinted he was ready to sit out next season unless Minnesota renegotiated his contract. "I won't play under this type of contract again," he emphasized. "I'm not happy about my contract or it wouldn't have come out. "I don't know what's going to happen. I do know why they don't want to renegotiate it. Legally, I guess I am obligated to play for two more seasons. But I also know I'm not going to play another season unless I'm happy."

After holding out for 2 1/2 weeks before the season got under way, Foreman rushed for 1,155 yards and also caught 55 passes in his fourth pro year. He is completing the first season of a three-year contract. "I had a guy representing me who mis-represented me," Foreman declared. "At the time I signed the contract, I was very naive. I've decided now that I'm underpaid. "But this is something that I don't want to talk about any more this week. I'm here to play in the Super Bowl and I'm here to win. The team and my teammates come first and my contract comes second. I want to put that issue on the shelf. So let's cut it off, please."

Grant might have been kidding about his defensive line getting old but Page, a 10-year veteran, wasn't in pads Wednesday afternoon when the Vikings went through their practice session. Page has a hemorrhoid condition but is expected to play against the Raiders. The Minnesota coach was asked about Page's charge that there's too much holding in pro football and that Oakland offensive lineman Gene Upshaw was a particularly guilty party. "Well," Grant replied diplomatically, "Defensive linemen always holler about that while offensive linemen say they don't. I don't know if players today hold any more or less than they used to."

"I think the officials do a pretty good job."

We're not concerned about penalties. I don't think they are either." "Because of the presence of Ken Stabler and Fran Tarkenton, Grant expects more than a few points to be scored Sunday. "I think there'll be some scores," he said. "I don't think you'll see a 14-10 game. Not with these quarterbacks and the talent there is at the skilled positions. You'll definitely see more scoring."

Madden was asked about Stabler, the leading passer in the AFC this season, and Raiders' safetyman George Atkinson. "The amazing thing about Ken," he replied, "other than the obvious things like his talent is his ability to absorb information and store it. You give him something and it comes out at the right time. "Atkinson happens to be a very good football player. He plays his position extremely well. He is aggressive but not overly so. He plays hard and with intensity."

False, Deceptive, Unfair Schemes Eyed by FTC

Crackdown Urged on Home Study Schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Federal Trade Commission study today called for a crackdown on "false, deceptive, and unfair" schemes used to promote vocational and home study schools to which 2 million Americans pay more than $2.5 billion in tuition each year.

The report recommends such schools be forced to tell prospective students their dropout rates and their job and salary prospects if job-finding claims are made, give students time to study such disclosures, and establish a refund policy for students who quit.

"The evidence on the record indicates that the commission must act forcefully to proscribe unfair and deceptive acts and practices engaged in by proprietary vocational schools and to offer remedial relief to consumers in order to discourage such acts and practices in the future," the staff study said.

It said such schools are estimated to be a $5 billion-a-year industry by 1985, but previous attempts to regulate them on a case-by-case basis have failed to clean up the business.

It recommended that disclosures on drop-out rates, salary prospects and the like be subject to a readability test — the first time that such a test would be required in an FTC trade regulation rule. The test recommended is that developed by Dr. Rudolph Flesch.

The consumer disclosures under the "Flesch Test" would be rated "very easy" to read and comprehend, the FTC staff said.

One recommended disclosure would read:

"Many of our students don't take this course to get a job. And we can't tell you your chance of getting a job when you finish. No one who works for us should talk to you about jobs or earnings."

Another, where a newly offered course is involved, would state:

"Our course is too new for us to know how often students who take this course finish or don't finish. So no one who works for us can answer this."

The agency originally proposed a rule governing vocational and home study schools in August, 1974. The proposal was republished in May, 1975, and today's report is the result of hearings held on the subject.

The latest recommendation, however, differs from the original in the "Flesch Test" provision as well as in a proposed exemption for schools which enroll 75 or fewer students each year.

The staff said while that approach would exclude 60 per cent of the approximately 8,000 schools from coverage, but cover 90 per cent of the students who attend such schools since most go to the larger schools.

Airbags to Cut Premiums

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The insurance industry has agreed to offer lower premiums for automobiles equipped with air bags, Transportation Secretary William Coleman Jr. reported.

Coleman told a news conference Wednesday that negotiations with the auto industry on a test project for air bags in cars are going "quite well" and a final announcement on the project is expected shortly.

Coleman has been meeting off and on for two weeks with industry representatives on his proposal for a two-year test project, beginning in September 1978, to place a half-million air bags in cars to test their injury prevention effectiveness, as well as consumer acceptance.

Coleman said the insurance industry agreed to offer lower premiums for air bag-equipped cars. Allstate Insurance Co., which has long backed the concept, already offered such reduced rates and some other insurance companies are now doing likewise.

Coleman said still unsettled is whether manufacturers can obtain liability insurance to protect themselves against claims from those injured if an air bag does not function properly in a crash.

Car Sales Have Key Effects

DETROIT (UPI) — Americans bought 10.1 million new cars in 1976 — the fourth highest in history and 17 per cent above disastrous 1975 levels.

But the full significance of the figures reported Wednesday on the best year since the Arab oil embargo in 1973 was the effect on the work force and on investment plans by U.S. and foreign automakers.

It enabled Detroit automakers to reduce layoffs from above 300,000 in early 1975 — 40 per cent of the blue collar force — to below 15,000 at the end of last year. Renewed interest in small cars could drop the figure even lower.

It also will lead to a record $6 billion expenditure on new plants in equipment this year as the industry attempts to write new records, topping 1973.

Volkswagen, once the No. 1 import and now fighting for third spot, is spending more than $300 million on an assembly plant in Westmoreland, Pa., to insure itself a spot in the American market.

The four domestic automakers sold 8,606,573 cars in 1976, nearly 22 per cent above the 7 million in 1975 and the highest level since pre-Arab oil embargo days in 1973. The foreign automakers watched their sales slip nearly 6 per cent to just under 1.5 million cars.

General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy used the occasion to repeat his prediction that sales in 1977 would be even better with domestic and foreign automakers selling 11.25 million cars.

With record truck sales included, total sales in 1977 could hit 14.75 million, topping 1973's record of 14.6 million, Murphy said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeanne Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 7

Your birthday today: Events this coming year provide you with broader perspectives, inspire revision of your goals and program. Previous limitations are not so important. Once reorganized, your life takes on added intensity. Relationships are uneven, with moments of deeper feelings. Today's natives are known for temperament, expressing their strong beliefs. Those born this year are active, will make lively students, apt to be precocious, so that early education is helpful.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People act at cross-purposes, go nowhere. It's not your job to straighten them out. Travel suffers confusion, delays; check before you start.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]:

Reconsideration is the theme now. Discipline in managing finances attracts respect as you thread your way through current economic complexities.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Much attention goes into understanding others, what they try to say. Friends take liberties with your good will unless you put your foot down.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Make a clear distinction between your welfare and that of outsiders. Home life requires candid question-and-answer sessions and self-restraint.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Associates pursue business in their own fashion, won't see work or anything else in the terms you do. If possible, take time off for medical advice.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]:

Much depends on your ability to stay out of public view. Momentum of established work habits carries you through encounters with moody people.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Whatever you did right in the past is reinforced now by favorable comment. It's doubtful budget can remain intact despite the best laid plans.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Old friends away for awhile have developed in different directions. Dissension surfacing among associates calls for new equilibrium for future.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Resist urgent suggestions to close existing transactions or to plunge into relatively unfamiliar investments. Get a second opinion first.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: By coming directly to the point, you're in danger of overstating your case. Space things out, recheck information, let intuition take form.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Clash shapes up between demands of people close to you and your dreams. Be flexible, seek a compromise. Unusual sources generate tall tales.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Go it alone where circumstances make it feasible. Where it's not, keep your own counsel. Criticism is offered by those who don't understand.

TEEN FORUM

By JEAN ADAMS, Ph.D.

SILENCE: (Q.) Mark won't come near me anymore. He seems to avoid me all the time now, and I'm too much of a girl to call him.

(A.) You say you are too much of a girl to call Mark. I say you are a foolish girl if you DON'T call him.

Every day that you let pass by in silence makes it easier for him to believe that what those silly girls told him is true.

Call him today and tell him what is really true.

WHY?: (Q.) Jack is 17 and I am 14. I like him a lot, but I'm not sure whether he likes me.

I've let him do some things that I've never let a guy do before. He acts like he likes me, but I'm not sure if he really likes me just likes me for what I let him do.

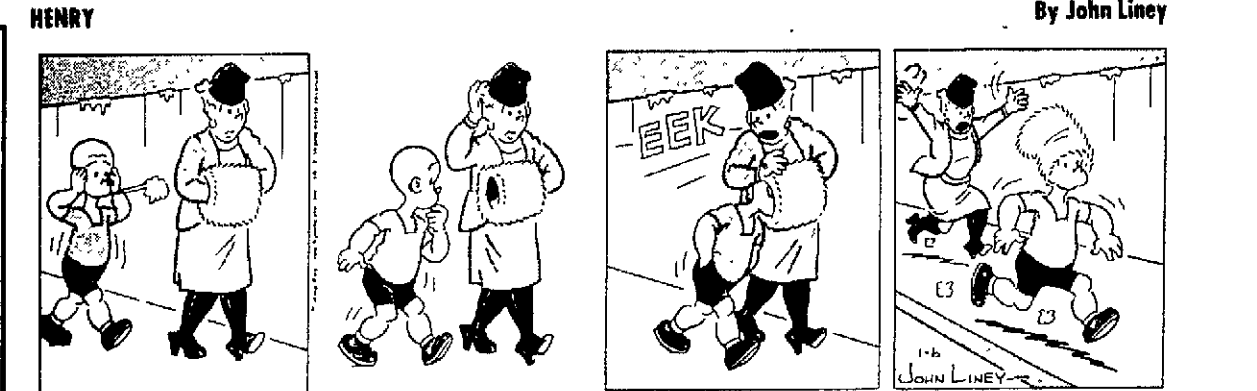

I've thought about asking him. What do you think I should do? — Not Sure in Oklahoma

(A.) You have made a mistake. You have tried to "buy" Jack by giving him a "bonus," something extra. You know now that this is wrong. Your conscience is telling you this, and you feel guilty.

Talk to Jack seriously. Tell him that have come to realize that whatever it is you and he are doing is the wrong thing to do. Tell him that you can't do it any more.

If he drops you, you will know that he liked you only because of the "bonus." If he stays with you, you will know that he really likes you.

(Have a problem? Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received, Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

SWIFT BRIDGE PLAY IS POOR EXERCISE

© 1977 Los Angeles Times

by Alfred Sheinwold

If you want to work up a good sweat, take up golf or tennis. Since you can't get the same effect by slapping the cards down swiftly at the bridge table, you might just as well take enough time to think.

ride otherwise. This play cannot lose and may gain.

AVOIDS LOSS

As the cards lie, declarer would avoid the loss of a spade trick. If East had started with Q-10 x x of spades, the play would limit the trump loss to one trick instead of two.

South could not avoid the loss of a trump trick when he led out the ace and king. Even if one opponent held Q-x, the other would still get a trump trick with his 10-x-x of spades.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: ♠J4 ♥K63 ♦A1064 ♣A854. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs or two diamonds. You intend to raise hearts later, thus showing a hand too good for a simple raise but not good enough for an immediate jump to three hearts.

But Planes Continue Hunt for Rafts

Search Ends for Tanker in North Atlantic

BOSTON (UPI) — The tanker Grand Zenith, carrying 38 Nationalist China crewmen and 8.2 million gallons of industrial fuel, apparently has vanished without a trace beneath the snarling North Atlantic that has claimed ships and men for centuries.

"There's one wild card in a thousand that says that ship is still afloat," Coast Guard Capt. Bernard Hoyland said Wednesday even before planes completed a sweep of nearly 150,000 square miles of ocean in a corridor 540 miles east of Cape Cod.

"The search for the tanker ended at nightfall today with negative results. We are changing our assumptions ... and assuming that we are looking for something much smaller, like rafts or lifeboats," Coast Guard Lt. Gary Cosciusko said when planes returned with no word of the 642-foot tanker.

Cosciusko said the planes were "going out at first light" today.

The captain of the 23-year-old tanker radioed seven days ago the Panamanian-registered ship had encountered rough seas south of Nova Scotia en route from England to Providence, R.I. The ship has not been heard from since.

"After the all-out search we've conducted, I'd say it's going to be a 10 per cent chance that she's still afloat, disabled and without electrical power and a 90 per cent chance that we're looking for people in rafts and lifeboats," said Hoyland, chief of search and rescue operations for the Coast Guard.

Water temperatures in the area hovered near 40 degrees, cold enough to render a man unconscious in 20 minutes. Wind gusted to 40 knots during the night and seas were running up to 15 feet. Water in the majority of the search area is more than 6,000 feet deep.

Other vessels mysteriously have disappeared in the same area: The Coast Guard said that within the last two years, the fishing vessels Zubenelgenubi and Patricia Marie and the research ship Gulf Stream have vanished.

"Everyone knows about the North Atlantic and its reputation," a Coast Guardsman said. "When you go to sea, you respect it."

Seven long-range aircraft from Canada and the United States flew from dawn to dusk for two days 1,000 feet above an ocean area the size of California, searching for the ship, debris or lifeboats. Radar scanned 50-mile swaths on each sweep.

Another tanker was lost to the Atlantic three weeks ago. The 640-foot Liberian-flag Argo Merchant broke up on Nantucket Shoals, dumping 7.6 million gallons of industrial oil into the ocean. Prevailing northwesterly winds drove the 270-mile oil slick seaward, but the Coast Guard said it could circle back and threaten Cape Hatteras.

"One of our chief concerns is what happens to the oil when it hits the Gulf Stream," Coast Guard Spokesman Doug

White said. "If it should get into the Gulf Stream, there's no way to know which way it will travel." He said the spill might move toward Cape Hatteras, or slice through the Gulf Stream to menace the fishing grounds of Iceland.

Oil Spill Hits California

(By UPI)

In the past three weeks, oil tanker mishaps have stained or threatened North American waters from Panama to Nova Scotia, including one on Wednesday in California.

The 634-foot American-registered Austin spilled 2,100 gallons of oil into Carquinez Strait while unloading at a Shell Oil Co. dock at Martinez, Calif., on Wednesday. The State Fish and Game Department reported about 200 birds were affected.

Here at a glance is a summary of the other incidents:

Dec. 15 — The Liberian-registered Argo Merchant ran aground 27 miles southeast of Nantucket Island where heavy seas pounded it to pieces, releasing 7.6 million gallons of oil to imperil rich fishing grounds.

Dec. 17 — The 810-foot Liberian-registered Sansineira blew up in Los Angeles harbor, killing nine persons and injuring 50.

Dec. 24 — The Oswego Peace spilled 2,000 gallons of oil into the Thames River near Groton, Conn.

Dec. 27 — The Liberian-registered Olympic Games ran aground in the Delaware River near Philadelphia, spilling 133,500 gallons of oil, fouling the shorelines of three states.

Dec. 29 — The Liberian-registered Daphne ran aground in Guayanilla Bay, Puerto Rico, but no oil was spilled.

Dec. 30 — The Panamanian-registered Grand Zenith, carrying 8.2 million gallons of oil and a crew of 38, vanished 50 miles south of Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, after radioing a report of heavy weather. No trace of the ship or its 38-member crew had been found by Thursday.

Jan. 4 — The Liberian-regis-

Bolt Hits Plane Over the Pacific

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A DC10 carrying 235 persons to Tahiti was struck by lightning over the Pacific Wednesday night, but the pilot dumped most of the jet's fuel into the ocean and landed the craft safely.

"There was no panic on the plane. Everybody was relatively calm, though we all did our private worrying about what was going to happen," recalled Wes Gallagher, former president of the Associated Press and a passenger on Air New Zealand Flight 561.

After the emergency landing

at International Airport, he said, the passengers applauded Capt. Tom Collins.

"The landing was better than usual," he added.

There were no reports of injuries. The 213 passengers and 15 crew members were taken to a nearby hotel for the night and scheduled on another flight today.
